Innocent Plea Given For Patty

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — As Patricia Hearst remained silent before him, a federal judge Monday entered a plea of innocent for the jailed heiress and set Dec. 15 as the date for her trial on bank robbery and weapons charges.

The action by U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter came despite repeated objections by Miss Hearst's attorney that she is not competent to stand trial. Carter ruled last Friday that she is competent.

The attorney, Albert Johnson, said he would appeal the setting of a trial date and declared that the judge's ruling "distorts the findings" of the psychiatrists who examined her. He demanded that the reports be made public to prove the point, but the judge refused.

After the 45-minute hearing, a pale Miss Hearst turned and smiled at her parents and a sister, who sat in the front row of the crowded courtroom. Attired in a brown pants suit, she chatted briefly with her attorney as she was led from the court.

Miss Hearst did not speak during the hearing, and Johnson said his client would stand silent rather than enter a plea to charges that she took part in an April 1974 bank robbery.

The judge then said he would enter a plea for her.

"If Miss Hearst stands mute, then the court will enter a plea of not guilty to the indictment on these charges," Carter said.

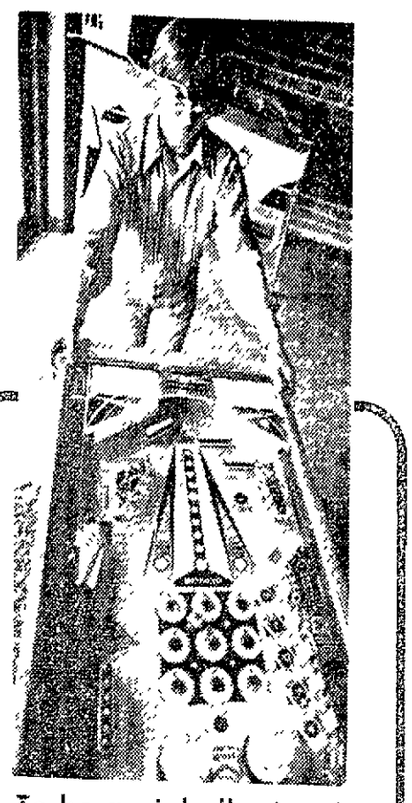

The judge added that although a trial date is set, he would consider changing it if the defense persuades him of Miss Hearst's incompetency. He refused to delay proceedings in the meantime.

The new federal Speedy Trial Act requires that defendants be tried within 90 days after arraignment. According to the government's interpretation, that means jury selection would have to begin for Miss Hearst by Dec. 27.

Carter set Nov. 20 as the date for a hearing on a motion to delay the proceedings and on any other pretrial motions filed by the defense. Johnson said he would have several such motions and that he intended to call several witnesses, including at least some of the three psychiatrists and one psychologist who examined Miss Hearst in jail. He contended the doctors should be cross-examined on the witness stand, saying he felt they would make clear that they view Miss Hearst as incompetent. He said the defense did not cross-examine them at Miss Hearst's competency hearing last week because the defense agrees with their findings.

The charges against the 21-year-old daughter of newspaper executive Randolph A. Hearst relate to the April 15, 1974, holdup of a Hibernia Bank branch by members of the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army, which had abducted Miss Hearst seven weeks before. Two passersby were wounded in the robbery.

Miss Hearst's attorneys have said she was brainwashed by the SLA and took part in the holdup only under threat of execution.

Reform Law Foes Argue Cash Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court was told Monday by proponents of the new election reform law that it is aimed at stopping an "arms race of political contributions," but opponents said it cuts off free speech because "money talks."

"It is speech," said Justice Potter Stewart during very close questioning from the bench. "Speech is money, and money is speech."

In an unusual 4½ hours of oral argument on the case, opponents charged that Congress stacked the 1974 Federal Elections Campaign Act in favor of political incumbents and made it harder for challengers.

Yale Law Prof. Ralph K. Winter said the law allows congressmen to send out millions of dollars worth of politically helpful mail under the franking privilege without regard to costs while denying the same level of campaigning to their opponents.

Winter also contended that a dark horse like Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota could never have won the Democratic presidential nomination in 1972 if the new contribution limits had been in effect.

Opponents of the law said restricting the amount of money a person may contribute to a campaign, and requiring him to report even a $100 gift, place unconstitutional chills on First Amendment free speech rights.

Deputy Solicitor General Daniel M. Friedman sought to rebut Stewart's "Money is speech" statement by arguing that "money affects speech, but I would not say money is speech."

Former Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox said the giving of money "is conduct and not speech."

Cox said Congress had no intention of censoring speech by limiting the amount of money that may be given to or spent by a campaign.

Quinlan Ruling Worries Some

A New Jersey decision Monday giving physicians the sole right to pull the plug on mechanically sustained patients left some Lincolnites apprehensive about how that power will be used.

Medical spokesmen said such decisions will be made with the wishes of the patient and the family in mind.

But others feared physicians would be hesitant to remove patients from life-support systems because of their desire to prolong life or the fear of malpractice suits.

In New Jersey, Superior Court Judge Robert Muir Jr. ruled that 21-year-old Karen Ann Quinlan, in a coma for six months, must be kept alive with mechanical life support systems because "there is no constitutional right to die." (Story on Page 5.)

The decision to remove patients from life-support systems must be made by the treating physician rather than parents, courts or churches, Muir ruled.

"I'm not sure if doctors are the best judges of those areas," said Rabbi Robert Kaiser of Lincoln's South Street Temple. "The classic Jewish position is that a doctor is mandated to preserve life but not to prevent death. Even that is a very tricky area.

'Life Like A Raft'

"Sometimes life can be like a raft and to sit on that raft too long, well, it can debase life rather than enrich it."

The Rev. Glover Leitch of the First Presbyterian Church said pulling the plug "is not entirely a medical decision."

"Life and death is not a medical matter," he said. "It's a matter of personal and theological beliefs . . . I don't believe in the artificial prolongation of life just to sustain bodily functions because life is more than that."

The Rev. Mr. Leitch said he is "in sympathy with the doctors" because the burden of decision has been placed on them.

'Public Partly At Fault'

"The public is partly at fault. We've put the doctor in the position of being sued or accused of something no matter what they do. The public in general should take a stand," he said.

P. D. Duensing, executive director of the Lancaster County Medical Society, said it is "very difficult for the ultimate decision to be made by the doctor."

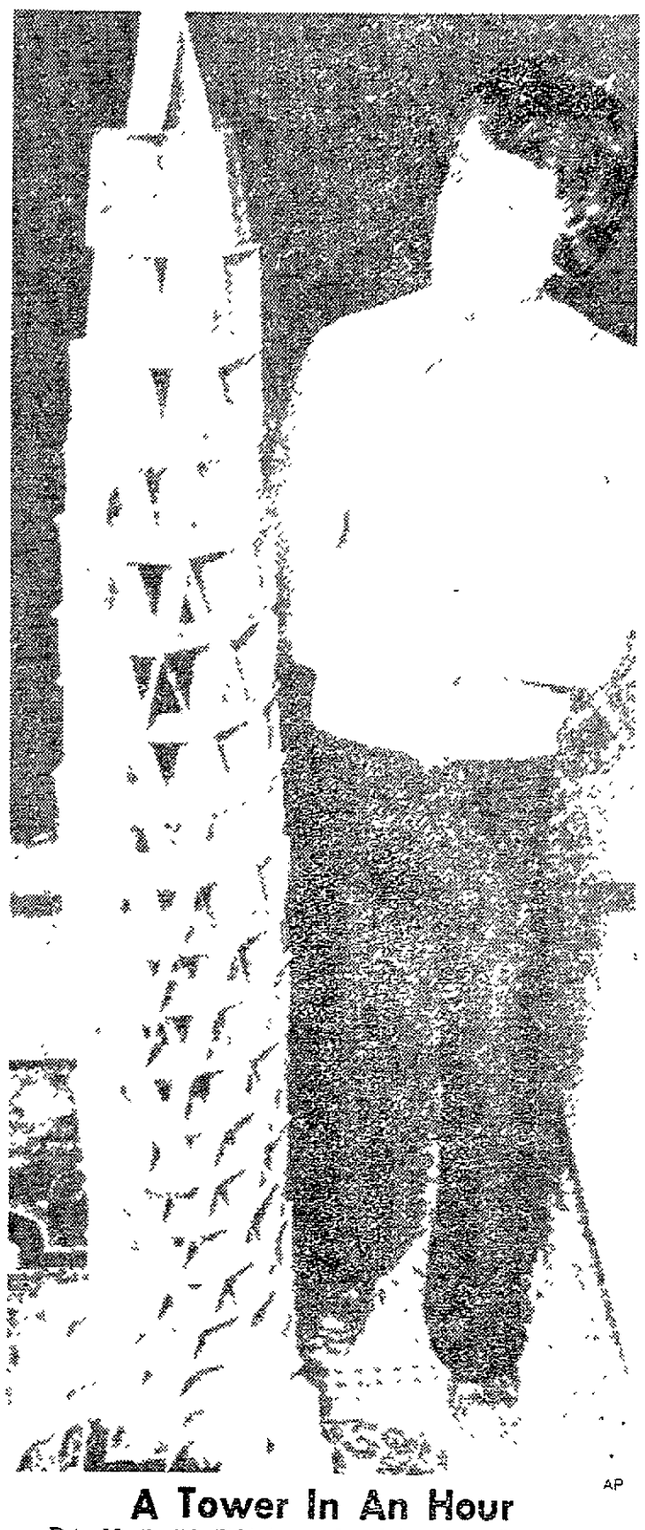

"There are many gray lines. This involves the decision of the doctor and also the family must be involved," he said, adding that the patient's condition and previously expressed wishes are also factors.

W. Robert Brungard, administrator of Lincoln General Hospital, said physicians must be "at least partially involved" in any decision to remove patients from life-support systems.

"We've always looked to the physician as the determining force . . . The physician has the greatest knowledge and determining power," he said. "But I'm sure he will share the decision with whoever it needs to be shared with."

Sen. Roland Luedtke, chairman of the Legislature's Judiciary Committee, said he has directed the committee's staff to compile a report on similar rulings in other states.

Luedtke said legislation is needed so people can specify in their wills that they wish to be allowed to die when their situation is hopeless and so physicians can carry out those wills without fear of liability.

Patty's Lover Pleads Innocent

Sacramento, Calif. (UPI) — Steven Soliah, Patricia Hearst's lover accused of a bank robbery and murder linked to the Symbionese Liberation Army, Monday pleaded innocent to the charge.

At the same time, U.S. District Judge Philip C. Wilkins agreed to the appointment of a second defense attorney, Steffan Imhoff of San Francisco, who previously has helped defend political radicals in trouble with the law.

The 27-year-old house painter is accused of bank robbery resulting in death in connection with the April 21 holdup of a Carmichael bank in which a mother of four children was shot to death with a shotgun.

A second defense attorney at public expense is a privilege normally given to defendants in capital cases. Wilkins said he would allow the second defense attorney even though it was clear that prosecutors did not intend to seek the death penalty.

Soliah spoke only to say he understood the charge, to plead "not guilty," and to respond "yes" when asked if he wanted a jury trial.

The case was turned over to U.S. District Judge Thomas J. MacBride who is presiding only 60 feet away at the trial of Lynette Fromme, accused of attempting to assassinate President Ford. No trial date was set for Soliah.

Prosecutors have indicated that more indictments would be sought and police believe at least four others were involved in the holdup.

Investigators say they have linked Miss Hearst to the crime through a stolen car used in the robbery.

Soliah is being held at the Sacramento County Jail on $250,000 bail.

Peters: Sales Tax Can Be Held Firm

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

State Tax Commissioner William Peters Monday told members of the Unicameral that their pending tax and budget legislative package need not force any 1976 increase in the state sales tax rate.

But a boost in the personal income tax rate from 12% to 15% will be needed to meet the state's financial obligations, he said.

The State Board of Equalization will meet Saturday to establish 1976 tax rates.

The Legislature is scheduled to complete its special session Tuesday with final enactment of its tax and budget proposals.

Peters said the state sales tax rate can remain at 2½% if the board will provide for only a 2% tax collection cushion for 1976. That is the course which he will recommend.

If the board opted for a 3% cushion, he said, that would trigger a bump in the sales tax rate to 3%.

One of the Legislature's pending bills, LB4, would reduce the current 5% cushion requirement to a minimum of 2% and a maximum of 3%.

Had the Legislature completely followed Gov. J. James Exon's recommendations, Peters said, no tax increases would have been required for 1976.

Exon wanted to eliminate any tax collection cushion requirement and allow the board to consider only estimated state expenditures, rather than appropriations, in establishing 1976 rates.

The Legislature's package reduces general fund obligations for fiscal 1975-76 by $15.9 million, Peters said.

That compares to Exon's recommended budget cuts of $10.4 million.

But, Peters said, much of the Legislature's reductions in 1975-76 obligations do not qualify as budget cuts since they represent "expenditures deferred for another year."

They may have "an impact on tax rate setting," he said, but they are "not budget cuts."

A 2% tax cushion would require $7 million more in revenue collections, Peters said.

The end result of the legislative package is likely to be a general fund deficiency of $12,520,301, he said.

That extra revenue must be raised by the end of the fiscal year next June 30. Each percentage of income tax rate raises about $4.9 million in the first six months, he said.

Thus, an additional 3% income tax rate is required to overcome the $12.5 million deficiency by June 30.

Appropriations Chairman Richard Marvel of Hastings asked Peters if he would vote for the legislative package Tuesday if he were a member of the Legislature.

Peters said he would if he did not want to stay in session any longer and attempt to revise the bills.

U.N. Assembly Declares Zionism Racism

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The U.N. General Assembly overrode bitter opposition from the United States and Israel Monday night to approve an Arab-inspired resolution that labels Zionism "a form of racism and racial discrimination."

The vote was 72-35 with 32 abstentions.

U.S. Ambassador Daniel E.Moynihan, who cast America's "No" vote, told the 143-nation assembly, "A great evil has been loosed upon the world. The abomination of anti-Semitism has been given the appearance of international sanction."

Delegates from Arab and Communist countries, joined by a majority of the so-called Third World nations, supported the nonbinding resolution, and greeted its passage with prolonged applause.

Among those voting against were the United States, Israel, the nine members of the European Common Market, Australia and Canada.

Earlier in the day the General Assembly passed two pro-Palestinian resolutions that drew heated reactions from Israel.

Supporters of the resolution equating Zionism with racism said it was anti-Zionist but not anti-Semitic. They argued that Zionism — the movement for a Jewish national homeland in Palestine — is exclusive and thus racist.

Moynihan, in one of the angriest speeches ever made by the U.S. envoy to the world body, said the assembly "granted symbolic amnesty, and more, to the murderers of the six million European Jews" during World War II.

He added that the United States "does not acknowledge, will not abide by, will never acquiesce in this infamous act."

Israeli Ambassador Chaim Herzog, taut with emotion, charged that the United Nations "is on its way to becoming the world center of anti-Semitism."

It was fitting, he said, that the decision was voted on Nov. 10 — the date in 1938 when Nazi stormtroopers attacked Jewish homes, businesses and synagogues throughout Germany, smashing so many windows it became known as "Crystal Night."

"Hitler would have felt at home on a number of occasions during the past year, listening to the proceedings in this forum," Herzog said, "and above all to the proceedings during the debate on Zionism."

Many Western diplomats predicted the General Assembly vote would draw hostile reaction from the U.S. Congress and from the public in America and Western Europe.

Clarence M. Mitchell, a U.S. delegate, predicted "very punitive" action by Congress if the Assembly declares "Zionism is a form of racism and racial discrimination." The Congress has the power to withhold approval of U.S. financial contributions and assessments for the budgets of the United Nations and the specialized agencies.

Many delegates thought Moynihan had made a veiled threat when he declared:

"Evil enough in itself, but more ominous by far is the realization that now presses upon us — the realization that if there were no General Assembly this could never have happened."

Fresh Vegetables In November?

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Carrots and cabbage fresh from the garden in November? You've got to be kidding — that's impossible in Nebraska.

But not in 1975 with the tricks Mother Nature has been playing with unseasonably warm pre-winter weather in this part of the country.

According to Lancaster County Extension Agent Emery Nelson, it is a rare year when eastern Nebraska hasn't had a killing frost by Oct. 15.

"We have almost never gone this long," he said, noting that 1975 has been an unusual fall.

Brussels sprouts, cauliflower, cabbage, carrots, turnips and spinach are still growing, he said, adding that it is pretty unusual to still have fresh garden vegetables this late in the year.

And that June rose may still be blooming in November along with many other plants usually killed earlier by frost.

Dick Campbell of Campbell's Nurseries said unusually warm temperatures have lengthened the blooming season as well as the planting season.

Normally all bulb plantings are in, he said, but last year "we didn't end our planting season until the second week in December."

However, the unseasonably warm temperatures have also been accompanied by unseasonably dry conditions which may create some problems.

With two dry seasons, Campbell said he was fearful trees may suffer serious damage or die.

Nelson said sudden cold temperatures and heavy snow could severely damage trees, as happened in the early 1940s.

He said he felt that with continued watering of trees and the light frosts to date, the trees should be hardened and ready for the winter months ahead.

However, he and Campbell both urged the continued watering of trees and shrubs.

Campbell suggested deep-root watering of trees — particularly evergreens — to insure moisture below the surface.

The weekend rain was not sufficient to reach the necessary areas, so watering is still needed, they said.

Fresh Vegetables In November?

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Carrots and cabbage fresh from the garden in November? You've got to be kidding — that's impossible in Nebraska.

But not in 1975 with the tricks Mother Nature has been playing with unseasonably warm pre-winter weather in this part of the country.

According to Lancaster County Extension Agent Emery Nelson, it is a rare year when eastern Nebraska hasn't had a killing frost by Oct. 15.

"We have almost never gone this long," he said, noting that 1975 has been an unusual fall.

Brussels sprouts, cauliflower, cabbage, carrots, turnips and spinach are still growing, he said, adding that it is pretty unusual to still have fresh garden vegetables this late in the year.

And that June rose may still be blooming in November along with many other plants usually killed earlier by frost.

Dick Campbell of Campbell's Nurseries said unusually warm temperatures have lengthened the blooming season as well as the planting season.

Normally all bulb plantings are in, he said, but last year "we didn't end our planting season until the second week in December."

However, the unseasonably warm temperatures have also been accompanied by unseasonably dry conditions which may create some problems.

With two dry seasons, Campbell said he was fearful trees may suffer serious damage or die.

Nelson said sudden cold temperatures and heavy snow could severely damage trees, as happened in the early 1940s.

He said he felt that with continued watering of trees and the light frosts to date, the trees should be hardened and ready for the winter months ahead.

However, he and Campbell both urged the continued watering of trees and shrubs.

Campbell suggested deep-root watering of trees — particularly evergreens — to insure moisture below the surface.

The weekend rain was not sufficient to reach the necessary areas, so watering is still needed, they said.

Kissinger Bars Summit Until Arms Pact Reached

Washington (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, while reaffirming the U.S. policy on detente with Russia, said Monday there can be no summit meeting between President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev unless accord is reached on strategic arms limitation.

On the other hand, he rejected reports that Chinese objections to detente are threatening to hold up the President's planned visit to Peking, saying the trip "is on schedule" for later this month.

Kissinger told a news conference he felt the current deadlock in strategic arms limitation talks could be broken, but "we do not conceive a summit without a SALT agreement or a visit by Mr. Brezhnev without a SALT agreement."

In his first session with reporters since Ford removed him from the parallel position as head of the National Security Council, Kissinger said he did not believe the President's shakeup of the administration would have any effect on the policy of detente.

On other points, the secretary:

— Acknowledged individual differences with James R. Schlesinger, ousted by Ford as defense secretary, but praised him as "a man of outstanding ability."

— Denied reports that his trip to Peking to lay groundwork for Ford's visit had gone badly, and said he considered the President's mission important although no substantive issues may be resolved.

— Said he agreed with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat that the displaced Palestinians must be included in any final Middle East settlement, but under terms that fully recognize the sovereignty of Israel.

Kissinger placed particular emphasis on the need to get the arms limitation talks off dead center, saying the Russians had rejected the latest U.S. proposal on that score and the next move now is up to Moscow.

"We don't believe that because the Soviets rejected the last one, we have to come up with another," he said. "I believe that 90% of the SALT negotiations are substantially agreed, but the remaining 10% on which there is no agreement as yet are of considerable significance.

"This does not mean that the chasm between us is unbridgeable, but we cannot accept that the other side only has to reject a U.S. proposal to get another. I am confident that with a serious effort on both sides, these differences can be bridged."

As for U.S.-Soviet relations generally, Kissinger said: "Detente is not a favor that we are granting to the Soviet Union, it reflects the assessment of the basic national position of both sides . . ."

FROMME . . . who blindfolded herself, has to be carried into court by marshal.

Fromme Barred From Trial Again

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Lynette Fromme, who blindfolded herself and was carried into the courthouse by a deputy marshal, was barred again Monday from her trial on charges of trying to kill President Ford.

Miss Fromme was banished Monday morning for the third time by U.S. District Court Judge Thomas MacBride when she refused to guarantee she would not cause further disruptions. MacBride said during the afternoon session that he asked through the U.S. marshal whether Miss Fromme had changed her mind and was told she had not.

Miss Fromme's decision to blindfold herself kept a vow made last Friday when she was twice ejected from the courtroom for demanding that Charles Manson testify. The 27-year-old defendant is a follower of Manson, who was convicted along with four followers of killing actress Sharon Tate and six others in 1969.

Meanwhile, jurors were shown how there could have been a clicking sound without the trigger being pulled on the gun Miss Fromme allegedly pointed at Ford.

And Lanier Ramer, a project assistant on the American Civil Liberties Union's prison project, was found in contempt of court for refusing to say whether he met with Miss Fromme more than a month before she was charged with trying to kill the President.

NFU Says Grain Deal 'Dangerous'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two major farm organizations opposed the U.S.-Soviet grain agreement Monday as a precedent for future bilateral commodity deals.

Tony T. DeChant, president of the National Farmers Union, called it a "dangerous departure from the policy of multilateral negotiation."

John C. Datt, congressional relations director for the American Farm Bureau Federation, said such government-to-government contracts "constitute further interference with the world market system."

The farm organization spokesmen testified before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in a series of hearings on U.S. foreign policy choices for the next decade.

DeChant said there is no price protection for farmers in the U.S.-Soviet grain deal. The United States, he said, would control export sales for the next five years.

"The power to control exports is the power to control and depress farmers' prices," he declared.

Datt told the committee that "agriculture must be allowed to compete in world markets without impairment by international commodity agreements."

International allocation of markets and government price determinations would, he said, "seriously restrict farmers' opportunity to expand markets and substantially reduce net farm income."

Richard L. Lesher, president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, said problems of international shortages, inflation and starvation are a proper concern of the U.S. government.

"However, the maximum that any government can provide is an enlightened atmosphere encouraging solution of such problems through the creativity and initiative of the enterprise system," he testified.

N.Y. Times Summary

'Mix Of Taxes' Considered

New York - Gov. Hugh L. Carey said that "a mix of taxes," including possible increases in the state's income, corporate and bank taxes and, possibly, an increase in the New York City sales tax, is being considered in the city and state strategy to obtain federal loan guarantees to help the city avoid default. An increase of 1% in the city's sales tax has been proposed, but Mayor Abraham D. Beame is against it. Beame, conceded, however, that a tax rise of some degree is being considered despite the city's no-tax pledge contained in the three-year austerity plan now in effect.

Demos Seek Ford Support

Washington — Senate Democratic leaders met with President Ford in an attempt to get his support for the $4 billion loan guarantee bill proposed for New York City, and said afterward that they had the votes needed to break a threatened Senate filibuster against the bill. L. William Seidman, one of Ford's chief economic advisers who was also at the meeting, said afterward that "the President said that if he had that proposition on his desk today, he would veto it."

'Understanding' Reached

Rabat, Morocco — Morocco's chief spokesman, Information Minister Ahmed Taibi Benhima, said Monday an understanding had been reached between Morocco and Spain on Morocco's claim to Spanish Sahara. "There is no agreement yet," the minister said.

Wheelchair Stolen From Vet

San Francisco — A Vietnam war veteran who lost both legs, an eye and part of an arm had his wheelchair stolen while he was taking part in a demonstration to show what handicapped veterans can do. James Brunotte, 26, has been active in developing a ranch near San Luis Obispo. His wheelchair was missing from his specially equipped truck after a parade in which he rode his Appaloosa horse.

ABM Treaty Ratified By Senate

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Monday ratified a treaty negotiated by President Richard M. Nixon in Moscow in 1974 — immediately before his resignation — limiting the United States and Soviet Union to a single anti-ballistic missile defense site.

The Senate approved the accord by a vote of 65 to 15, easily obtaining the required two-thirds majority of those present and voting.

Under the agreement, the United States will be limited to a single AMB field at Grand Forks Air Force Base in North Dakota, while the Soviet Union will maintain similar, anti-missile defenses around Moscow.

Both sides can give notice to the other in 1977-1978 that they would like to switch the arrangements, with the United States constructing a single ABM defense around Washington and the Soviet Union building a similar defense around one of its strategic missile fields.

Water Project Rules Revised

Washington (UPI) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said Monday it will give environmental and social impacts heavier weights in considering water works projects and it will also take into consideration a "no development" alternative.

The corps said it was issuing new regulations to "insure a more balanced consideration of environmental and economic values in planning of future water resources projects." The regulations will be subject to a period of review and public comment and possible revision before becoming effective.

Victor V. Veysey, assistant secretary of the Army for civil works, said the revised regulations reflect "public concerns, particularly ecological and social values.

"National economic development and environmental quality must be given equal consideration in federal water and related land planning programs," he said.

The corps has frequently been criticized as a construction oriented agency with little concern over the preservation of resources.

Veysey said the new regulations require assessments of alternatives as water works projects are reviewed, including the "no development" alternative.

Californian Accused Of 4 Murders In Iowa

Cedar Falls, Iowa (UPI) — Authorities Monday arrested Jerry Allen Mark, 32, of Berkeley, Calif., and charged him with four counts of murder in the Nov. 1 slayings of his brother's family.

Mark was being held in the Black Hawk County jail on $1 million bond — $250,000 on each count — in the slayings of Leslie and Jorjean Mark, both 25, and their children. Julie, 5, and Jeff 2. All the victims suffered multiple gunshot wounds.

Also being held on $100,000 bond on a perjury charge was Marilyn Sue Forrest, 25, also of Berkeley, Calif. Authorities declined to say if Ms. Forrest's arrest was connected with the murders, but sources said her arrest was related.

A neighbor found the bodies of the Mark family early on the morning of Nov. 1. The bodies of Mark and his wife were found in a downstairs bedroom and the bodies of the children were found in separate upstairs bedrooms of the two-story farmhouse.

The arrest culminated what was described as the most intense investigation in local history.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Lynette Fromme, who blindfolded herself and was carried into the courthouse by a deputy marshal, was barred again Monday from her trial on charges of trying to kill President Ford.

Time Now To Speak Out For The Younger Men

DALLAS — The more you look at the men who are now running for president, the more you have to wonder about the men who are not running.

It is a long and even formidable list: Senators Hubert Humphrey and Fritz Mondale of Minnesota; Senators Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, Ed Muskie of Maine, and Mac Mathias of Maryland; Governors Brown of California and Askew of Florida; former Governors Connally of Texas and Reagan of California; and finally among others, Elliot Richardson of Massachusetts, the greatest cabinet-maker since Chippendale.

These men are at least as impressive as the declared candidates, which is modest praise, but still you have to think that there must be something wrong if the list of non-candidates is better than the list of candidates, and the people do nothing about it.

By the logic of life, the young men and women in their 40's or even in their 30's should now be coming to the forefront of the presidential race. The majority of our people are now under 40 and the central question of the last years of the 1970's are wholly new and are not likely to be resolved by the Hooverish conservatism or New Dealish innovation of the past.

But by the accidents of life, the natural American preference for picking leaders when they're coming instead of when they're going somehow seems to have got lost. After Eisenhower, the Democrats gambled on young Jack Kennedy, almost against their will, but when he was murdered, they went back to Johnson, and both parties have been stuck with old geezers in their sixties ever since.

It can scarcely be argued that these senior citizens have such a brilliant record from the past, or such clear visions and answers for the future that they deserve another chance.

Humphrey clearly fought his way to the leadership of his party, and at least, he has the good judgment not to fight for the nomination, which he knows should go to younger men. Ford is the last of the Nixon accidents in one of the most forgettable eras in American history.

Both parties have to share the blame for these dreary years. Though the percentage of the defense budget went as high as 9% of the GNP in recent years, we stumbled into an unnecessary Vietnam war and lost it. Though social welfare spending went from $24 billion in 1950 to $242 billion in 1974, the welfare muddle is still a national disgrace.

Though we are beginning to come out of the worst economic slump since the '30's, October unemployment was up over 200,000 to over 8 million or 8.6% of the work force — the biggest rise since the May, 1975, high of 9.2%.

In the light of all this, it scarcely seems reasonable for the parties to offer to the nation these men from another time, and while it is true that we now have no Jeffersons, Jacksons, or Monroes, or Lincolns, on the scene, the present list of candidates is not that bad, and is probably as good or even better than the Willkies, Deweys, Trumans, Goldwaters, Nixons, and McGoverns were when they were nominated.

The outlook for picking the right man out of the runners and non-runners, however, is fairly bleak when you look at the 30-odd primary elections some of them will go through and some of them won't. It is almost enough to make you consider the heretical idea that with all these state presidential primary elections, maybe democracy has got out of hand.

Or even worse, to whisper a good word for that most criticized and condemned institution of American politics — "the smoky room." The notion that the people in primary elections are better qualified to pick a national leader from the runners than are the party leaders, who know both the runners and the non-runners, is a distinctly American idea.

It sounds more democratic, and in many ways it probably is. But, for example, the British, who know something about democracy, see no conflict between democracy and party responsibility for picking the best man they have, running or not. They leave the final choice to the people, but not the preliminary decision about which candidates are to be considered and which ignored.

In the last few days, meeting with editors in Alcapulco, bankers in Columbus, Ohio, and voters here and elsewhere in between, it is hard to avoid the undemocratic conclusion that the American people are both dissatisfied with the candidates they think they're going to get next year, and still feel helpless to do anything about it.

So the prospect is for an exhausting primary season leading in the end to a race between two leaders of the last generation.

Unless, of course, the people begin to organize now, state by state, for a protest vote on behalf of younger men.

This can be done only by a write-in campaign of massive proportions in all the primary states. No such demonstration of public protest has ever been launched nation-wide before, but maybe the time has come for the people to start demonstrating for the men of the future.

After the primaries, you can be sure they will be griping, but by then it will be too late.

The Open, Candid Ford

The Republicans have a balanced team regardless of President Ford's choice of a running mate should he win the 1976 presidential nomination.

There is the President, who has strength among moderate-to-conservative voters, the people of the small towns and rural areas and the elderly. To balance him is a public figure with solid appeal among east and west coast residents, big city people, laborers, suburbanites, the young, the liberals and the independents.

The balanced team: Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Ford.

Pollster Louis Harris has found strong support for Mrs. Betty Ford across the nation, such that she has become one of the most popular first ladies. With regard to the controversial statements Mrs. Ford has made recently, "the public leaves no doubt that it backs her up decisively," Harris said.

His poll shows that "By and large, Mrs. Ford is supported most by those segments (mentioned above) of the public who are least likely to back her husband in the 1976 election. By the same token, she finds her least support among those who are apt to back the President . . ."

Harris concludes that while Mrs. Ford's controversial statements might not help her husband's cause with some people — especially on the far right — she has won support among elements her husband needs next year and "in short, Betty Ford has a wide and deep following in the mainstream of American life, and surely must be judged a solid asset to her husband in the White House."

Recall the President earlier this year biting hard on his pipe whenever Mrs. Ford sounded off a la Martha Mitchell? However, Ford in his responses was unlike John Mitchell, who sometimes pretended he never heard what his wife said, or said he wished she'd shut up, and who finally left her. The President would grit his teeth, smile and say the members of his family had strong opinions and liked to speak their minds and as far as he was concerned, they were free to do so. Or he'd try to make jokes about it like, "I told my wife she cost me 20 million votes, but when I read in the morning paper what she said last night I upped it to 30 million."

The joke's on Jerry. His wife is more popular than he is. Although their comparative ratings are not all that important because she holds no office or power, it says something about the public's perception of candor.

It is beginning to look as if the First Lady is the really open, candid, honest member of the First Family. She is telling it like it is on issues which interest her, while the President is slipping into the habit of talking in circles and ambiguities or reversing his field — anything but laying it on the line unless caught.

Ford can look to his wife's ratings in the polls to see which approach the public prefers.

Less Than One Out Of Five

By some estimates, the city of Lincoln talked about the Northeast Radial for 40 years and not much was done about it except for unending studies, annual resolutions by the council and planning commission, ceaseless campaign rhetoric and, most tangibly, right-of-way acquisition.

But the city never got around to building the freeway, the cost of which kept ballooning. It kept going up so fast we forget the last estimate. Obviously $20 million has to be low.

And the city fathers kept catching flak for always talking and never acting.

But the mood slowly changed on the issue of the radial and then came the Coalition's campaign which resulted in a negative referendum vote.

Today, according to a survey prepared by the city Urban Development Department, less than 20% of the people polled in northeast Lincoln favor construction of the radial, while almost half oppose it. About one-third have no opinion.

How the dead proposal would fare in a city-wide poll is open to speculation, but one could reasonably guess that the results wouldn't be any more favorable. When less than 20% of the people living in the area which would be directly affected favor it, that says something.

The feet-dragging did some good. What was wasted in terms of planning, right-of-way and hot air is nothing compared to what might have been.

Carter Well-Received In Iowa

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa — "I honestly believe I'm going to be your next president," says former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter.

His style is low-key, what Madison Avenue likes to call "sincere," and his message is strictly middle of the road: "There is no inherent conflict between careful planning, tight management, and constant reassessment on the one hand and compassionate concern for the plight of the deprived and afflicted on the other."

That safe-and-sane message is going over well in Iowa, which will become a closely-watched state in a couple of months. On Jan. 19, a non-primary primary will take place: In each political precinct, Iowa's Democratic and Republican voters will meet in caucus to choose their delegates to next summer's party conventions.

Four years ago, an indication that Ed Muskie's frontrunning was an illusion came in Iowa's caucus, when George McGovern's organizations first displayed their talents. Today, similar talk about effective organization centers on the Carter people; the television salesmen here say the first queries about time availabilities for a TV blitz right after New Year are coming from Carter's headquarters.

Although Carter leads the polls at the moment, Humphrey shows his strength as a write-in on straw ballots, and no support is more impressive to polls than write-ins, which show an intensity of feeling.

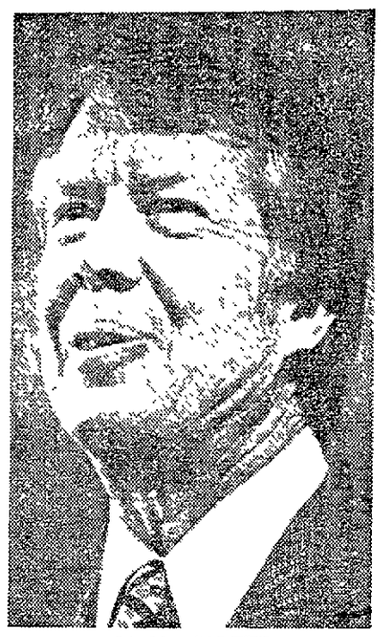

Scoop Jackson shares labor support with Carter, but his campaign shows a lack of savvy: Denouncing the "Nixon-Ford administration" (much as Nixon denounced the "Johnson-Humphrey administration" in 1968, though Johnson was not running) Jackson told an Ames, audience the nation had witnessed the worst mismanagement of the economy since Herbert Hoover. The Democratic audience sat on its hands; Herbert Hoover's birthplace is only a few miles away, and a certain local affection for him exists.

On the Republican side, one might think that former Des Moines radio sportscaster "Dutch" Reagan would be moving hard and fast to exploit his local background and grab the spotlight here, but the Reagan talk is muted. This is Ford country, at the moment; his cabinet shakeup was not seen as all that important here, and those who noticed thought it showed the President to be a take-charge executive.

On both sides, the size of the "undecideds" in polls and casual conversation is enormous: Rapidians are getting as cagey as the over-interviewed residents of Concord, N.H.

Does the forthcoming national interest in Iowa make sense? Is this caucus really important? The answer is yes, because this first test of strength will be treated as important by national media, which — like it or not — makes it important. And after the McGovern experience, which caught most of the press grassrootless, rest assured Iowa's "first" will be swarmed over.

JIMMY CARTER

We will be hearing reports from a generally happy land. Thanks to the weather, the corn crop is in early this year, and farmers are having a more leisurely November than usual. No recession took place here, and though farmers grumble about the upward assessed valuation of their thousand-an-acre farmland, the biggest problem Iowans seem to face is what to do with the $200 million surplus that came in from the state sales tax.

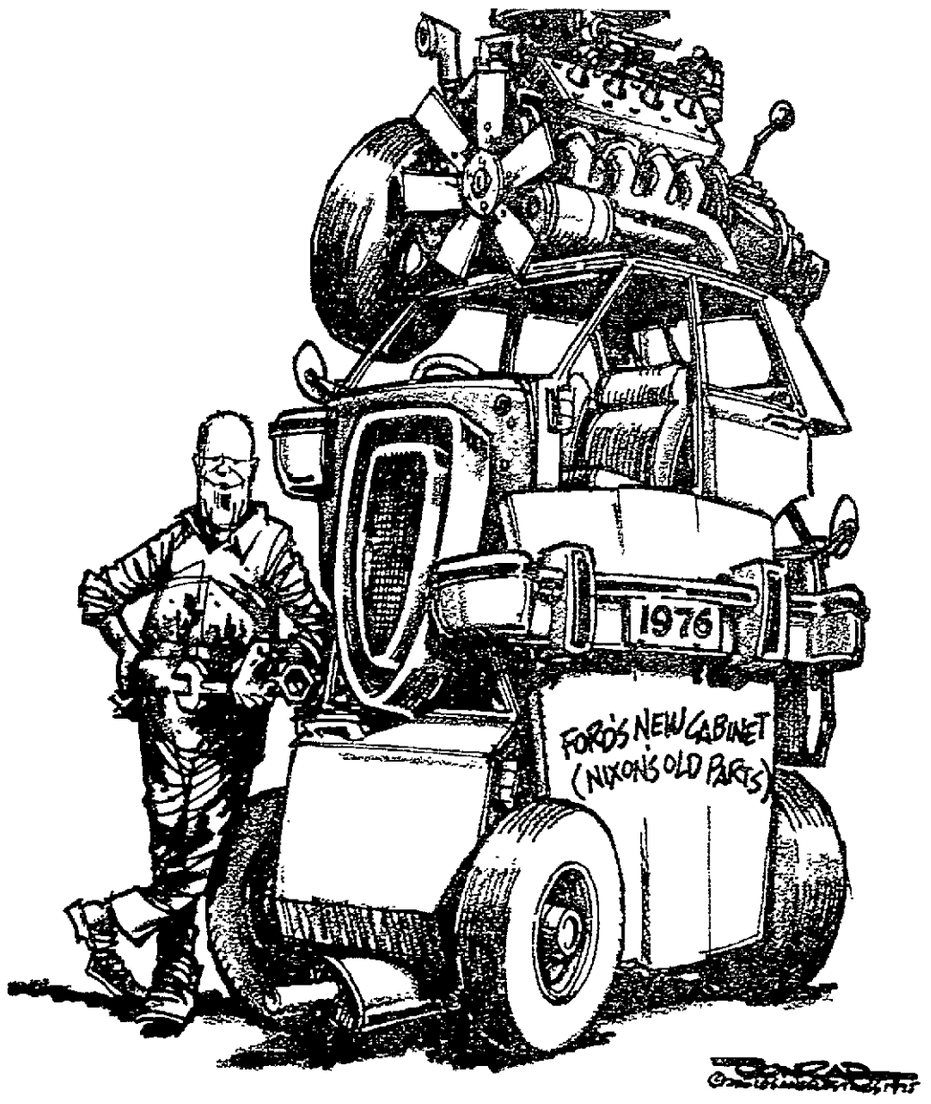

Though candidates abound, nobody rides through the cornfields with a flaming sword. At Coe College in Cedar Rapids, nobody's dander is up. With Midwestern interest so closely tied to grain sales and detente, the traditional isolationism has become a self-interested internationalism. Iowa's voters display their bipartisanship by choosing two U.S. senators who are Democrats along with a Republican governor, Robert Ray, who is the most popular man in the state.

In Iowa, prosperity is on the side of the man in the White House. What does an opposition candidate do when he has good times going against him? He organizes his troops, spends time meeting the folks, stresses his trustworthiness and fuzzes up any issues.

That is why Democratic campaigners in the middle of America play the politics of the 50-yard line. Jimmy Carter's message is calculated to offend nobody: "Waste and inefficiency," he straddles in all sincerity, "Never fed a hungry child. . ."

Payola Scandal

WASHINGTON — The record companies promote their hits with a bag of dirty tricks that would shame the CIA.

We first began exposing the payola racket in March, 1972. We charged that the industry offers free vacations, furnishes prostitutes, provides automobiles and pays cash under the table to disc jockeys and other radio officials to get records played.

Our exposes goaded the Federal Communications Commission into an investigation. Four grand juries have now returned indictments against 19 record industry officials.

One of our sources, Mike Viner of Pride Records, has agreed to shed his anonymity and speak for the record. Here are more of the disclosures he has made in a written statement:

—Major record companies hire outside promoters to push records. No questions are asked about how they spend money. Some of it, said Viner, is paid directly to radio program directors in exchange for airing records.

—Fred Rector, one of those who has been indicted, received thousands of dollars from MGM Records to "sew up" radio stations, swore Viner.

—Various methods are used to pay off broadcasters. Record pushers sometimes contribute to "Christmas funds" for disc jockeys. One imaginative program director asked for money, saying he needed it to pay off a Mafia loan.

—Viner identified one renowned record promoter as Jim Benci, who gets up to $3,000 for a single job. We spoke to Benci, who denied any wrongdoing.

—While working for MGM records, Viner was once ordered to obtain reservations at an Elvis Presley appearance in Las Vegas for 24 broadcasting and record officials. He paid the hotel's maitre d' a $500 "tip," then listed the sum on his expense account as "bribery." Viner's honesty, of course, got him into hot water with MGM Records.

MGM has since sold its record division, and the recording company is under new ownership and management.

Footnote: Bill Gavin, whose respected "Gavin Report" is read throughout the record industry, attacked Viner and called his charges "unsupported."

It's 'Buycentennial'

WASHINGTON — "Buycentennial," the cynics mutter, as merchandise commemorating the 200th anniversary of American independence continues to flood the market. Even the New Jersey State Lottery has gotten into the act. Starting Nov. 17, the Garden State will offer a "1776 Instant Lottery" at $1 per ticket. The grand prize, which will be drawn for every 16 million tickets sold, is $1,776 a week for life.

The lucky winner could easily squander his earnings, if he so desired, on bicentennial souvenirs. How about a model of the Mayflower in silver? Shreve, Crump & Low, the Boston jewelers, offered one for $30,000. And the U.S. Bicentennial Society of Richmond, Va. — a private concern, despite its official-sounding name — is selling $2,500-per-pair replicas of George Washington's flintlock pistols and $1,295 reproductions of the chair John Hancock sat in when he signed the Declaration of Independence.

So much for the carriage trade. Most bicentennial mementos are moderately priced, and some of them are free. There are T-shirts, belt buckles, ice buckets, tricorn hats, alarm clocks and assorted knicknacks. Giveaways include ballpoint pens and shopping bags. A Michigan firm has come up with a red-white-and-blue garbage bag with a Liberty Bell printed on one side.

Merchandising the Spirit of '76 is nothing new. Souvenirs and advertising giveaways were common a century ago when the nation celebrated its 100th anniversary with an exposition at Philadelphia. Companies gave away such items as bars of soap and tiny tin buckets of lard manufactured for the occasion. Pattern-glass tumblers bearing patriotic mottoes were sold, as were George Washington bookmarks and coffee cups and George and Martha belt buckles.

These and other centennial souvenirs are now collector's items whose value has increased over the years — but not as much as one might think. One antiques catalogue puts the price of a George Washington centennial coffee mug at $40. An empty sample tin of Naphy's Leaf Lard, stamped with the dates 1776 and 1876, sells for $18. And a wooden napkin ring originally bought at the Philadelphia exposition recently was purchased for $6 at an auction in Northern Virginia.

Despite the precedent of 1876, some people profess to be appalled by the merchandising aspects of the bicentennial. "Red, white and blue lawn chairs are just another means of commercialism," said Edward McColgan, executive director of the Massachusetts Bicentennial Commission. "Red, white and blue chairs are totally irrelevant to 1976, and I doubt that the Founding Fathers would have considered them relevant."

Others object to the use of bicentennial themes in advertising copy. Commenting on a newspaper ad by Mobil Oil that featured Revolutionary patriot Samuel Adams, advertising executive Jerry Della Femina said that "it would have been valid for Mobil to use Sam Adams — if Adams had used Mobil gas to drive his horse."

It can also be argued that a high-toned bicentennial celebration entirely lacking in hoopla and kitschy souvenirs would be not only boring but a false reflection of the American spirit. As an English writer, Frances Trollope, said of Americans in 1832, "Nothing can exceed their activity and perseverance in all kinds of speculation, handicraft and enterprise, which promises a profitable pecuniary result . . ."

ERA's Defeat Loudly Applauded

NEW YORK — When the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) went down to resounding defeat in New York and New Jersey, I couldn't help feeling relieved.

The amendment was deceptively simple, and has been debated on too high a level of emotionalism. Whether one was for or against the ERA, one was tarred with a sticky political brush.

In favor? Then you were a follower of militant feminist thinking. Against? Then you must be a right-wing conservative at best, or even a John Bircher

There was plenty of angry rhetoric being hawked on street corners and telephones during the last weeks before the election — but there was no reasonable, temperate gathering together of women with judges and lawyers and sociologists to study the implications and ramifications that might ensue from those 26 little words:

"Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the state of New York or any subdivision thereof on account of sex." (The New Jersey ERA wording was even simpler: "Equality of rights under law shall not be denied or abridged on account of sex.")

☆ ☆ ☆

What did the words really mean?

The proponents, who included many highly revered individuals including Mrs. Gerald Ford, said that all they mean is that each person will be treated equally, under law. Any inference that ERA might seriously endanger family life in America, they assured, is "scare talk."

The opponents said they weren't spreading scare talk, but were trying to bring reason to the controversy. If legal equality, as represented by ERA, becomes a reality, they warned, homemakers will be robbed of hundreds of state laws which make men responsible for wives and children. If men are divested of those legal responsibilities, they asked, how many women will dare stay home and take care of children — knowing their father can move out and leave them without resources?

The supporters said that theory was wrong: ERA would not outlaw alimony but, rather, give either spouse the right to receive alimony, depending on the circumstances . . .

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT
. . . warned against rapid progress . . .

Before she died, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt warned against a too-swift progress of women toward total equality. If accomplished too quickly, she said, women's equality in politics, finance and extra-family ventures "will lead to widespread unhappiness."

In a later interview, Ruth Dayan—the irrepressible ex-wife of Israel's Mosbe Dayan — told me that the women in her country have "total equality, not only equal pay for equal jobs. And if you ask me," she said, "it is not always too good to be so liberated. I know women in my own family whose health has been destroyed from getting out and doing man's work."

With woman-protective laws already in the books — we already have the Civil Rights, Equal Employment, Equal Pay and Age Discrimination Acts — perhaps we should not ask for the ultimate leveler without further thought and research. With ERA in the legal books, it's possible that we'd be stepping in the path of what Senator Sam Ervin called "an atom bomb to kill a mouse."

Payola Scandal

WASHINGTON — The record companies promote their hits with a bag of dirty tricks that would shame the CIA.

We first began exposing the payola racket in March, 1972. We charged that the industry offers free vacations, furnishes prostitutes, provides automobiles and pays cash under the table to disc jockeys and other radio officials to get records played.

Our exposes goaded the Federal Communications Commission into an investigation. Four grand juries have now returned indictments against 19 record industry officials.

One of our sources, Mike Viner of Pride Records, has agreed to shed his anonymity and speak for the record. Here are more of the disclosures he has made in a written statement:

—Major record companies hire outside promoters to push records. No questions are asked about how they spend money. Some of it, said Viner, is paid directly to radio program directors in exchange for airing records.

—Fred Rector, one of those who has been indicted, received thousands of dollars from MGM Records to "sew up" radio stations, swore Viner.

—Various methods are used to pay off broadcasters. Record pushers sometimes contribute to "Christmas funds" for disc jockeys. One imaginative program director asked for money, saying he needed it to pay off a Mafia loan.

—Viner identified one renowned record promoter as Jim Benci, who gets up to $3,000 for a single job. We spoke to Benci, who denied any wrongdoing.

—While working for MGM records, Viner was once ordered to obtain reservations at an Elvis Presley appearance in Las Vegas for 24 broadcasting and record officials. He paid the hotel's maitre d' a $500 "tip," then listed the sum on his expense account as "bribery." Viner's honesty, of course, got him into hot water with MGM Records.

MGM has since sold its record division, and the recording company is under new ownership and management.

Footnote: Bill Gavin, whose respected "Gavin Report" is read throughout the record industry, attacked Viner and called his charges "unsupported."

It's 'Buycentennial'

WASHINGTON — "Buycentennial," the cynics mutter, as merchandise commemorating the 200th anniversary of American independence continues to flood the market. Even the New Jersey State Lottery has gotten into the act. Starting Nov. 17, the Garden State will offer a "1776 Instant Lottery" at $1 per ticket. The grand prize, which will be drawn for every 16 million tickets sold, is $1,776 a week for life.

The lucky winner could easily squander his earnings, if he so desired, on bicentennial souvenirs. How about a model of the Mayflower in silver? Shreve, Crump & Low, the Boston jewelers, offered one for $30,000. And the U.S. Bicentennial Society of Richmond, Va. — a private concern, despite its official-sounding name — is selling $2,500-per-pair replicas of George Washington's flintlock pistols and $1,295 reproductions of the chair John Hancock sat in when he signed the Declaration of Independence.

So much for the carriage trade. Most bicentennial mementos are moderately priced, and some of them are free. There are T-shirts, belt buckles, ice buckets, tricorn hats, alarm clocks and assorted knicknacks. Giveaways include ballpoint pens and shopping bags. A Michigan firm has come up with a red-white-and-blue garbage bag with a Liberty Bell printed on one side.

Merchandising the Spirit of '76 is nothing new. Souvenirs and advertising giveaways were common a century ago when the nation celebrated its 100th anniversary with an exposition at Philadelphia. Companies gave away such items as bars of soap and tiny tin buckets of lard manufactured for the occasion. Pattern-glass tumblers bearing patriotic mottoes were sold, as were George Washington bookmarks and coffee cups and George and Martha belt buckles.

These and other centennial souvenirs are now collector's items whose value has increased over the years — but not as much as one might think. One antiques catalogue puts the price of a George Washington centennial coffee mug at $40. An empty sample tin of Naphy's Leaf Lard, stamped with the dates 1776 and 1876, sells for $18. And a wooden napkin ring originally bought at the Philadelphia exposition recently was purchased for $6 at an auction in Northern Virginia.

Despite the precedent of 1876, some people profess to be appalled by the merchandising aspects of the bicentennial. "Red, white and blue lawn chairs are just another means of commercialism," said Edward McColgan, executive director of the Massachusetts Bicentennial Commission. "Red, white and blue chairs are totally irrelevant to 1976, and I doubt that the Founding Fathers would have considered them relevant."

Others object to the use of bicentennial themes in advertising copy. Commenting on a newspaper ad by Mobil Oil that featured Revolutionary patriot Samuel Adams, advertising executive Jerry Della Femina said that "it would have been valid for Mobil to use Sam Adams — if Adams had used Mobil gas to drive his horse."

It can also be argued that a high-toned bicentennial celebration entirely lacking in hoopla and kitschy souvenirs would be not only boring but a false reflection of the American spirit. As an English writer, Frances Trollope, said of Americans in 1832, "Nothing can exceed their activity and perseverance in all kinds of speculation, handicraft and enterprise, which promises a profitable pecuniary result . . ."

ERA's Defeat Loudly Applauded

NEW YORK — When the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) went down to resounding defeat in New York and New Jersey, I couldn't help feeling relieved.

The amendment was deceptively simple, and has been debated on too high a level of emotionalism. Whether one was for or against the ERA, one was tarred with a sticky political brush.

In favor? Then you were a follower of militant feminist thinking. Against? Then you must be a right-wing conservative at best, or even a John Bircher.

There was plenty of angry rhetoric being hawked on street corners and telephones during the last weeks before the election — but there was no reasonable, temperate gathering together of women with judges and lawyers and sociologists to study the implications and ramifications that might ensue from those 26 little words:

"Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the state of New York or any subdivision thereof on account of sex." (The New Jersey ERA wording was even simpler: "Equality of rights under law shall not be denied or abridged on account of sex.")

☆ ☆ ☆

What did the words really mean?

The proponents, who included many highly revered individuals including Mrs. Gerald Ford, said that all they mean is that each person will be treated equally, under law. Any inference that ERA might seriously endanger family life in America, they assured, is "scare talk."

The opponents said they weren't spreading scare talk, but were trying to bring reason to the controversy. If legal equality, as represented by ERA, becomes a reality, they warned, homemakers will be robbed of hundreds of state laws which make men responsible for wives and children. If men are divested of those legal responsibilities, they asked, how many women will dare stay home and take care of children — knowing their father can move out and leave them without resources?

The supporters said that theory was wrong: ERA would not outlaw alimony but, rather, give either spouse the right to receive alimony, depending on the circumstances . . .

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT
. . . warned against rapid progress . . .

Before she died, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt warned against a too-swift progress of women toward total equality. If accomplished too quickly, she said, women's equality in politics, finance and extra-family ventures "will lead to widespread unhappiness."

In a later interview, Ruth Dayan—the irrepressible ex-wife of Israel's Moshe Dayan — told me that the women in her country have "total equality, not only equal pay for equal jobs. And if you ask me," she said, "it is not always too good to be so liberated. I know women in my own family whose health has been destroyed from getting out and doing man's work."

With woman-protective laws already in the books — we already have the Civil Rights, Equal Employment, Equal Pay and Age Discrimination Acts — perhaps we should not ask for the ultimate leveler without further thought and research. With ERA in the legal books, it's possible that we'd be stepping in the path of what Senator Sam Ervin called "an atom bomb to kill a mouse."

Parents Cannot Unplug Respirator

. . . Judge Holds Only Karen's Doctors Can Decide

Morristown, N.J. (UPI) — The parents of Karen Ann Quinlan cannot pull the plug on her respirator and let her die, New Jersey Superior Court Judge Robert Muir Jr. ruled Monday.

Only Karen's doctors may decide whether there is any reason to keep using the respirator, even though Karen's brain has been virtually destroyed by nearly seven months in a coma, Muir said.

"The single most important temporal quality Karen Ann Quinlan has is life," Muir said in his 44-page opinion. "This court will not authorize that life to be taken from her."

It Would Be Homicide

In rejecting the parents' plea that 21-year-old Karen be allowed to "die with dignity" rather than linger on, the judge agreed with state attorneys that pulling the plug would be "homicide" under New Jersey law.

"Humanitarian motives cannot justify the taking of a human life," Muir wrote. "The fact that the victim is on the threshold of death or in terminal condition is no defense to a homicide charge."

Muir said he was issuing the decision "with prejudice," which means that the Quinlans may not re-plead the case in Superior Court on different grounds. They may, however, appeal his decision to a higher court — a course of action the parents of the comatose woman have not yet decided on.

In a news conference, Karen's mother, Julia, said, "We haven't decided whether to appeal. We want to sit down with our two children and discuss this."

Father Prays For Judge

Karen's father, Joseph T. Quinlan, 53, said, "As I said before, I have been praying for the judge to make the right decision. I am sure that the judge made the decision he thought was right."

He added: "We're still praying for God's will. Somehow God showed His will to the judge."

State Atty. Gen. William F. Hyland called Muir's ruling "predictable" and "in the public interest."

The Quinlans received Muir's decision in the privacy of his chambers in the Morris County Courthouse here, where the judge heard their plea — unprecedented in American history — in a five-day trial two weeks ago.

Muir said he wanted to spare the Quinlans the "anguish" of dealing with the day-to-day medical decisions in Karen's future, and he appointed lawyer Daniel R. Coburn as her guardian.

Miss Quinlan lapsed into a coma last April 14 after mixing alcohol and tranquilizers. She has not regained consciousness.

During the trial, six neurologists testified that Karen's state was "vegetative," but asserted that her condition did not fit the so-called "Harvard criterion" of brain death, under which doctors often remove patients from life-sustaining devices.

In her testimony, Mrs. Quinlan said that Karen on three occasions had asked that she not be kept alive by extraordinary means if the situation ever arose. Quinlan, meanwhile, testified simply that Karen had a right to die naturally and be taken "into the loving hands of the Lord."

'An Historic Opinion'

After Muir issued his ruling, Morris County Prosecutor Donald G. Collester, who argued the case for the state, said, "The opinion pretty much speaks for itself. Nobody wins or loses. It is an historic opinion. There's no question about that."

Muir said that if he had based his decision on his own personal conscience, "the compassion, empathy, sympathy I feel for Mr. and Mrs. Quinlan . . . would play a very significant part in the decision."

Muir underlined the word "very" in his text.

But a decision based on emotion, he wrote, would set a "legally detrimental precedent."

Portugal Hands Angola Independence

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — Portugal handed the mineral-rich colony of Angola its independence Monday and made a hasty exit, leaving the fate of the country tied to warfare among rival black liberation movements backed by East and West. The fighting threatens to engulf central Africa in a growing bloodbath.

There was no flag-lowering fanfare as planned to mark the end of 500 years of colonial rule, only a quick ceremony at the government palace, followed by the equally quick departure of the high commissioner, Adm. Leonel Cardoso, his staff and Portuguese troops.

Police of the Soviet-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola — MPLA — immediately took control of the palace, the 16th century fort of Sao Miguel and other Portuguese military installations.

(Government sources in Lisbon said Portuguese President Francisco da Costa Gomes led a last-minute drive within Portugal's military leadership to hand power in Angola over to the MPLA, but encountered near-unanimous resistance.)

(Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told a Washington news conference that both Soviet and Cuban support of the MPLA was a "serious matter," and that the United States "will not stand still for any hegemonial aspirations" on the part of the Kremlin in Angola.)

At the fort of Sao Miguel, the departing Portuguese abandoned 15 vehicles and left two more heavy troop carriers behind along the seafront as they boarded a frigate bound for Lisbon.

Further along, on the narrow island which houses the naval dockyard, marines and paratroopers with field guns and two armored cars took up positions, preventing anyone from moving forward as the men boarded their ship.

Two helicopters circled overhead as warships waited in the harbor and another patrolled outside to ensure the safe departure of the last Portuguese troops in Angola.

As if things weren't bad enough, the capital's water supply was reduced to a trickle Monday, reportedly because one of the liberation groups scored a strategic mortar hit on a key pipeline. Repairs are expected to take a week.

Portugal's high commissioner announced the handover of power to the "Angolan people" at noon in the chandeliered ballroom of the old colonial government palace. The transfer came 12 hours ahead of schedule.

The three rival African movements, which have plunged the nation into a year-long civil war over who should control the mineral-rich territory, were not represented.

The two rival movements of the MPLA are the National Front for the Liberation of Angola or FNLA — which reportedly hit the water pipeline — and the Union for the Total Independence of Angola — UNITA.

Life Begins At Forty:

Seniors' View Helpful To Elected Officials

By JOANNE FARRIS

Jim Weaver is a first-term congressman from the Fourth District of Oregon. He has employed a senior citizen full time on the staff of his district office in Eugene, Ore. Readers of this column who live in other states may want to suggest this idea to their representatives in Congress.

It is one more way to get some input of ideas on the national level from the burgeoning senior sector of our society, with the hope of having an impact on what Congress does for senior citizens. More than that, a well-chosen person in this position can give the congressman an idea of how older persons feel about various contemplated legislative matters that may not be of direct specific relevance to them, but which will have an impact on their lives.

Out of this small beginning, another program with great potential merit is growing. More than 20 public officials in Lane County, Ore., will work with senior volunteer staff interns this year. The intern participants will acquire an education in community affairs and will be serving their county

Like their counterparts on Congressman Weaver's staff, they will present a new point of view to the local officials, and it is assumed they will give to their own contemporaries a new perspective on the work of the public servants for whom they will be the interns.

Most politicians recognize the value of the many older persons who give untold hours of volunteer service in campaigns at all levels. They, the old, join forces with the young in this as in so many other endeavors and I dare say no political campaign could be conducted successfully without their aid.

Senior volunteers prove their interest and zeal for politics. Serving in the offices of those they help to elect is a natural corollary. They have the time and the energy, and they acquire the necessary political "savvy" via their campaign work.

Not the least portion of their value to any elected public official is the fact that they are a vocal, concerned representative of a constituency which numbers more than 20 million persons and which is growing every day.

The senior citizens I talk to have definite ideas about the federal programs they want or believe they need for their own present and future well-being.

More and more persons in their 50s are taking an interest in such matters, knowing that they will soon be among the senior citizens group themselves

Most important, however, are the knowledge and insight, born of their experiences of living, which these older persons bring to bear on the problems of government. They have the wisdom of a lifetime to share with the officeholder and his or her staff. They bring another point of view to bear on the problems of government, thus enabling our public servants to represent all the people more accurately.

Woman Officer Turns In Badge After 6 Weeks

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Janice King, Franklin County's first female road deputy, turned in her badge Sunday.

"I just found that I didn't like it all that well," she said.

Mrs King, 28, said her decision to quit after less than six weeks was a "mutual agreement" between her and her husband of two months, Joseph, a race car driver She will become a housewife again

"He's worried about my safety," she said, "and I can see his point . . . We didn't think it would be that hard on either one of us when I started out, but it just didn't work out."

Mrs King said she had not had any real problems on the road.

"A simple thing like stopping for coffee or going to the restroom was a problem," she explained. "The male deputies can just stop at a firehouse or gas station. I never felt comfortable because I would be the only woman there."

Sheriff Harry Berkemer said he probably will hire another woman road deputy, but did not know when

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — The waiter showed me the label. "A very good year, sir." He wound the corkscrew into the cork. I said: "Careful, Whetstone, don't bruise it."

"No fear, sir," said Whetstone. The cork came out — pop! He poured a little in the glass and swirled it around to let it breathe. He handed it to me.

"It has a good nose," I said. "A little immature but a Lolita of the grapes."

I said: "Leave it on the table, Whetstone. What I don't drink, I'll take home to the dog."

We don't do things by halves.

I said: "Whatever happened to Frank?"

☆ ☆ ☆

World War II was at a halfway mark when Frank appeared in North Beach. He spoke no English and he wore a GI uniform with a patch "Italy" on the shoulder.

He was captured with thousands of others in North Africa. They shipped him to the United States. He wound up on a POW kitchen detail in the Presidio of San Francisco.

When Italy made peace and Mussolini hung head downward in a Milan gas station, the Italians POWs were in an odd position. Still prisoners but what you might call friendly prisoners.

They were issued American uniforms with the "Italy" flash on the shoulder and kept on working for the Army.

☆ ☆ ☆

When Frank wandered into North Beach it was like coming home. The rich smell of pasta and wine. The stores that sold twisted black cigars to men playing cards and speaking Italian.

In Larry Salarpi's restaurant, he got a glass of wine. "What are you doing in that uniform?" said Larry in Italian.

"I'm a prisoner of war," said Frank.

"That's crazy," said Larry. "The war in Italy is over. Don't you read the papers?"

"Listen," said Larry, "I need a waiter. Take off those foolish clothes. There's a Tuxedo in the back room about your size."

Frank became the best waiter in North Beach. When Larry Salarpi sold his place, Frank went to Doro's. In a short time he became head waiter. He married a nice girl from North Beach.

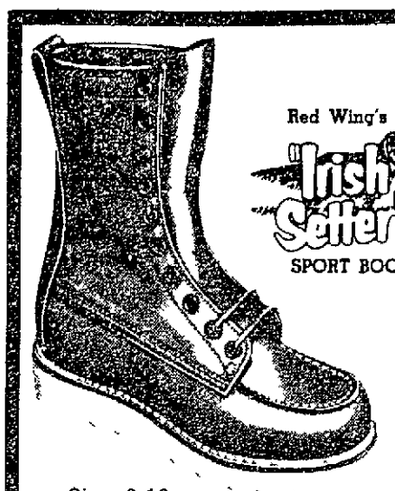

In Doro's they said to me: "Frank? He's got his own place. The Villa d'Este down in Los Altos. He's got seven children now."

CELEBRATING OUR 75th YEAR

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

Life Begins At Forty:

Seniors' View Helpful To Elected Officials

By JOANNE FARRIS

Jim Weaver is a first-term congressman from the Fourth District of Oregon. He has employed a senior citizen full time on the staff of his district office in Eugene, Ore. Readers of this column who live in other states may want to suggest this idea to their representatives in Congress.

It is one more way to get some input of ideas on the national level from the burgeoning senior sector of our society, with the hope of having an impact on what Congress does for senior citizens. More than that, a well-chosen person in this position can give the congressman an idea of how older persons feel about various contemplated legislative matters that may not be of direct specific relevance to them, but which will have an impact on their lives.

Out of this small beginning, another program with great potential merit is growing. More than 20 public officials in Lane County, Ore., will work with senior volunteer staff interms this year. The intern participants will acquire an education in community affairs and will be serving their county.

Like their counterparts on Congressman Weaver's staff, they will present a new point of view to the local officials, and it is assumed they will give to their own contemporaries a new perspective on the work of the public servants for whom they will be the interns.

Most politicians recognize the value of the many older persons who give untold hours of volunteer service in campaigns at all levels. They, the old, join forces with the young in this as in so many other endeavors and I dare say no political campaign could be conducted successfully without their aid.

Senior volunteers prove their interest and zeal for politics. Serving in the offices of those they help to elect is a natural corollary. They have the time and the energy, and they acquire the necessary political "savvy" via their campaign work.

Not the least portion of their value to any elected public official is the fact that they are a vocal, concerned representative of a constituency which numbers more than 20 million persons and which is growing every day.

The senior citizens I talk to have definite ideas about the federal programs they want or believe they need for their own present and future well-being.

More and more persons in their 50s are taking an interest in such matters, knowing that they will soon be among the senior citizens group themselves.

Most important, however, are the knowledge and insight, born of their experiences of living, which these older persons bring to bear on the problems of government. They have the wisdom of a lifetime to share with the officeholder and his or her staff. They bring another point of view to bear on the problems of government, thus enabling our public servants to represent all the people more accurately.

Woman Officer Turns In Badge After 6 Weeks

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Janice King, Franklin County's first female road deputy, turned in her badge Sunday.

"I just found that I didn't like it all that well," she said.

Mrs. King, 28, said her decision to quit after less than six weeks was a "mutual agreement" between her and her husband of two months, Joseph, a race car driver. She will become a housewife again.

"He's worried about my safety," she said, "and I can see his point . . . We didn't think it would be that hard on either one of us when I started out, but it just didn't work out."

Mrs. King said she had not had any real problems on the road.

"A simple thing like stopping for coffee or going to the restroom was a problem," she explained. "The male deputies can just stop at a firehouse or gas station. I never felt comfortable because I would be the only woman there."

Sheriff Harry Berkemer said he probably will hire another woman road deputy, but did not know when.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — The waiter showed me the label. "A very good year, sir." He wound the corkscrew into the cork. I said: "Careful, Whetstone, don't bruise it."

"No fear, sir," said Whetstone. The cork came out — pop! He poured a little in the glass and swirled it around to let it breathe. He handed it to me.

"It has a good nose," I said. "A little immature but a Lolita of the grapes."

I said: "Leave it on the table, Whetstone. What I don't drink, I'll take home to the dog."

We don't do things by halves.

That's the way they do it in the British novels. His lordship up to his riding boots in the claret. The rascal of a nephew pinching the governess. The upstairs maid playing hi-de-ho with the downstairs butler.

In a flash of moonlight we see a masked figure climbing the ivy to the haunted tower of Shoulder Arms.

Well, here's a brisk and sunny day. So off to North Beach where the pasta is homemade and the red wine is rich from the sun kissed hills of Tuscany.

Doro's is one of the elegant Italian restaurants. Far enough out to be in North Beach. Close enough to the financial district to get a tailored luncheon crowd. Forget the wine year. If it's red, it's good enough for us.

Iowa Man Gets Lost, Burned In Auto Fire

Alliance (AP) — A Dubuque, Iowa, man got lost early Sunday on his way to Denver, then lost his car and wound up in a hospital here.

Albert Cupps, 60, remained hospitalized for observation here Monday following a strange sequence of events.

Cupps told authorities he was driving to Denver, when he made a wrong turn at Sidney, Neb.

He wound up stuck in the sand on a Sheridan County road about 110 miles north of Sidney.

Ass Cupps tried to get his car out of the sand early Sunday, his spinning tires caught fire, and later ignited the car's gasoline tank and the auto exploded.

Cupps reportedly stamped out the fire and sustained minor burns.

He then began walking for help, and after covering an estimated six miles, he was picked up by Richard Loomis of Alliance.

Loomis transported the bewildered Cupps to a local hospital, but Cupps then went into shock.

He was listed in fair condition Monday.

Nebraska Retail Sales Up 4.6% For Quarter

Net taxable retail sales in Nebraska were $1.39 billion for the second-quarter period of 1975.

This dollar volume of taxed sales represents a 4.6% gain over the $1 32 billion recorded for the same three-month period of 1974.

The 4.6 percentage points of increased sales failed to cover the combined increase in the level of retail commodity prices — of 10.1 percentage points — and a 1% population increase.

Douglas and Lancaster Counties dominated the state's retail activity. Although a number of regions in the state had smaller percentage increases, Douglas' 2.3% and Lancaster's 2.8% increases determined the state change by holding down the combined effects of increases in other large volume regions.

Iowa Earnings Stable

Des Moines (UPI) — Iowa has earned $9 million in interest from state fund investments, about the same as last year despite an average drop of 2-3% paid for investments, State Treasurer Maurice Baringer said.

John Klinker

Klinker To Quit As President Of Farm Bureau

John Klinker, president of the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation, announced Monday that he is leaving his job at the end of his current term for health reasons.

Klinker made his surprise announcement at the monthly meeting of the Agricultural Committee of the Chamber of Commerce in Lincoln.

"I won't be a candidate for re-election at the end of my current term. My doctor says I am going to have to curtail my activities because of health reasons," he said.

Klinker of Omaha was named president in November 1972, succeeding Roland Nelson of Mead.

Klinker had previously served the Farm Bureau as vice president and as a district director for northeast Nebraska.

Arbor Day Foundation Eyes Tract

Nebraska City (AP) — Funds have been pledged to allow the Arbor Day Foundation to purchase the 225-acre Porter Orchards across the road from Arbor Lodge State Historical Park here.

Arbor Lodge was the home of J. Sterling Morton, founder of Arbor Day and land being purchased was part of the original Morton estate.

The acreage is valued at $350,000 and purchase transactions should be completed in mid-January, according to State Sen. Calvin Carsten of Avoca.

Carsten, president of the foundation's executive committee, said Monday that half of the funds will be provided through the federal historic preservation act over a two to three year period and that several private foundations are committed to match those funds.

Carsten said the land aquisition would assure that Arbor Lodge is not surrounded by residential developments and provides a site for a planned National Arbor Day center.

Ed Commissioner To Attend Council Meet

Nebraska Education Commissioner Anne Campbell said Monday she plans to attend the Council of Chief State School Officers annual meeting Nov. 16-19 in Atlanta, Ga., to "borrow some good ideas."

Dr. Campbell said she has "no compunction" about borrowing what works elsewhere if it will work equally well for Nebraska education.

Since she was appointed last September and took office in January, it will be Dr. Campbell's first session with the council, composed of the 50 top state education officers and six from extra-state jurisdictions.

While the council meeting "should be a high priority" for the Nebraska Department of Education, Dr. Campbell said the department is still "affected by action of the Legislature" and its 3% budget cut imposition Thus, she said she may be forced to stay home to tend the spending scalpel.

F. David Mathews, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, and U.S. Education Commissioner Terrel H. Bell will address the state chiefs on current federal issues and concerns in education John Richardson Jr., State Department assistant secretary, and C. William Fischer of the new congressional budget office will also speak.

The council will consider international education and federal collective bargaining. Dr. Campbell said she's interested in finding better ways for her and the State Board of Education to accomplish goals together.

During the meeting, the council also will determine policy on urban and rural education, energy, students and the economy, goals for American education, competency-based education, child and family services, and basic skills.

Dr. Campbell said she doesn't plan to run for any of the open council offices.

K.C. Man Charged In Omaha Killing

Omaha (AP) — A Kansas City, Mo., man, Alvin E Kirby, 43, has been charged with manslaughter in connection with the Saturday night shooting death of an Omaha woman

The charges, according to Deputy County Atty. Edward Warin, stemmed from a Saturday night incident outside an Omaha theater.

Kirby allegedly walked into the theater and told employes that he had just accidently shot a woman, according to police.

Investigators said they found Betty J. Jackson, 45, in an auto just outside the theater. She had been shot once in the neck and was dead on arrival at a local hospital, police said.

Kirby told officers that he had been dating Miss Jackson on weekends for about 5 years, and that he was trying to show her a revolver when she was shot.

Kirby said he was removing a .38-caliber revolver from a bag when the hammer caught and the weapon discharged.

Klinker made his surprise announcement at the monthly meeting of the Agricultural Committee of the Chamber of Commerce in Lincoln.

"I won't be a candidate for re-election at the end of my current term. My doctor says I am going to have to curtail my activities because of health reasons," he said.

Klinker of Omaha was named president in November 1972, succeeding Roland Nelson of Mead.

Klinker had previously served the Farm Bureau as vice president and as a district director for northeast Nebraska.

Arbor Day Foundation Eyes Tract

Nebraska City (AP) — Funds have been pledged to allow the Arbor Day Foundation to purchase the 225-acre Porter Orchards across the road from Arbor Lodge State Historical Park here.

Arbor Lodge was the home of J. Sterling Morton, founder of Arbor Day and land being purchased was part of the original Morton estate.

The acreage is valued at $350,000 and purchase transactions should be completed in mid-January, according to State Sen. Calvin Carsten of Avoca.

Carsten, president of the foundation's executive committee, said Monday that half of the funds will be provided through the federal historic preservation act over a two to three year period and that several private foundations are committed to match those funds.

Carsten said the land aquisition would assure that Arbor Lodge is not surrounded by residential developments and provides a site for a planned National Arbor Day center.

Ed Commissioner To Attend Council Meet

Nebraska Education Commissioner Anne Campbell said Monday she plans to attend the Council of Chief State School Officers annual meeting Nov. 16-19 in Atlanta, Ga., to "borrow some good ideas."

Dr. Campbell said she has "no compunction" about borrowing what works elsewhere if it will work equally well for Nebraska education.

Since she was appointed last September and took office in January, it will be Dr. Campbell's first session with the council, composed of the 50 top state education officers and six from extra-state jurisdictions.

While the council meeting "should be a high priority" for the Nebraska Department of Education, Dr. Campbell said the department is still "affected by action of the Legislature" and its 3% budget cut imposition. Thus, she said she may be forced to stay home to tend the spending scalpel.

F. David Mathews, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, and U.S. Education Commissioner Terrel H. Bell will address the state chiefs on current federal issues and concerns in education. John Richardson Jr., State Department assistant secretary, and C. William Fischer of the new congressional budget office will also speak.

The council will consider international education and federal collective bargaining. Dr. Campbell said she's interested in finding better ways for her and the State Board of Education to accomplish goals together.

During the meeting, the council also will determine policy on urban and rural education, energy, students and the economy, goals for American education, competency-based education, child and family services, and basic skills.

Dr. Campbell said she doesn't plan to run for any of the open council offices.

K.C. Man Charged In Omaha Killing

Omaha (AP) — A Kansas City, Mo., man, Alvin E. Kirby, 43, has been charged with manslaughter in connection with the Saturday night shooting death of an Omaha woman.

The charges, according to Deputy County Atty. Edward Warin, stemmed from a Saturday night incident outside an Omaha theater.

Kirby allegedly walked into the theater and told employes that he had just accidently shot a woman, according to police.

Investigators said they found Betty J. Jackson, 45, in an auto just outside the theater. She had been shot once in the neck and was dead on arrival at a local hospital, police said.

Kirby told officers that he had been dating Miss Jackson on weekends for about 5 years, and that he was trying to show her a revolver when she was shot.

Kirby said he was removing a .38-caliber revolver from a bag when the hammer caught and the weapon discharged.

Trial Of Simants Set For January

North Platte (AP) — A Jan. 5 trial date was set Monday for the accused slayer of six members of a Sutherland family.

Lincoln County District Court Judge Hugh Stuart set the date in a hearing here Monday, at which Erwin Charles Simants, 29, entered a plea of "not guilty" to the six counts of first degree murder.

He is charged in the Oct. 18 deaths of six members of the James Henry Kellie family.

Both defense and prosecution attorneys estimated the jury trial would take two weeks.

Stuart also denied a defense motion seeking bond.

Stuart overruled defense motions seeking dismissal of the charges because of legal errors during the bind-over proceedings.

Defense attorneys argued that the state statutes on homicide and the statute permitting the death penalty were unconstitutional and not in keeping with previous rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court and were in violation of the 4th, 5th, 6th, and 8th amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

A third motion to dismiss the appeal of Stuart's previous gag order that restricted news converage of the preliminary hearing in the case will be taken up Monday, Nov. 17 at 1:30 p.m.

Nebraska Supreme Court Delays 'Gag Rule' Action

The Nebraska Supreme Court said Monday it will wait until the U.S. Supreme Court decides if it will consider a "gag rule" imposed in the Erwin Simants case before acting.

Pending before the Nebraska high court is a request for original jurisdiction for action on a lower court order banning news media coverage in the Simants case on the grounds it would prejudice jury selection.

Simants has been charged with the death of six members of the Henry Kellie family in Sutherland.

Lincoln County District Judge Hugh Stuart barred newsmen from reporting on certain aspects of the case, following a gag rule imposed by County Judge Ronald Ruff.

A number of news organizations appealed the order to the Nebraska Supreme Court on Oct. 31 and subsequently to the U.S. Supreme Court on the grounds the order violates free press guarantees.

Omaha, Stanton Deaths Boost State Fatality Toll

From Press Reports

Nebraska's 1975 highway death toll stands at 326, following a fatal accident in Omaha Sunday night.

Jolene K. True, 21, of Bloomfield, a student at the Nebraska Methodist Hospital School of Nursing, was killed when she was struck by at least three vehicles in West Omaha. Police said Miss True ran from a service station driveway across busy West Dodge Road and ran into the side of a truck-camper driven by Harold Gatewood of Omaha.

Police investigator Daniel Kuhl said she was then run over by a car driven by Kevin Kelly and a van driven by Judson Skoogsmith, both of Omaha. Kuhl said a fourth auto may also have run over the woman.

No charges were filed against the drivers involved.

Meanwhile, the State Patrol Monday released the identity of the man killed in a one-car crash near Stanton Sunday night.

The victim was Tom Mandl, 24, of Stanton, who was fatally injured in a crash about two and one-half miles west of Stanton on Hwy. 24, according to the patrol.

Mandl's car was eastbound, went into the south ditch, rolled over and burned, the patrol said. Gary Wolff, 29, of rural Madison, and Robert Hartl, 21, of Stanton, were pulled from the car. The driver of the vehicle was undetermined, authorities said.

At this time last year, the state's road deaths totaled 341.

S. Dakotan Sentenced To Life In Prison

Omaha (AP) — A South Dakota man was sentenced to life in prison Monday in the death of an Omaha man last winter.

Douglas County District Court Judge Samuel Caniglia passed the sentence on Ronald R. Ell, of Mitchell, noting that Ell did not actually pull the trigger of the gun which killed Micheal Kellogg, 21.

Kellogg, a civilian, was shot to death as he tried to aid police following a robbery of an Omaha supermarket.

Three men were involved in the robbery, Ell, John Edward Rust, and Donald Fread. Fread was shot to death by police during a chase following the robbery.

Ell and Rust were captured, but not before Kellogg was shot to death and two Omaha police officers were wounded.

Ell and Rust stood trial in July. The jury found Rust guilty of murder, but was unable to decide whether Ell was guilty of murder and one count of shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim.

Rust was convicted of firing the gun that killed Kellogg, and is now scheduled to die in the electric chair at the Nebraska Penal Complex in January. However, Rust's death sentence is now undergoing a required judicial review.

Under Nebraska's felony-murder rule, all participants in a crime such as robbery are legally liable for any murder which occurs in the course of the crime or during an attempted escape from the crime.

Ell "did not pull the trigger and did not even shoot at" Kellogg, said Caniglia, who noted that a house physically separated Ell from the spot where Kellogg was shot.

"This mitigating circumstance is the difference between the sentence I'm going to impose upon you ... and the death sentence," Caniglia told Ell.

Caniglia also sentenced Ell, 29, to serve terms of 16 years, 8 months to 50 years on each of three counts of shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim. The three sentences are to be served concurrently, but Caniglia, noting that a life sentence "doesn't always mean a life sentence," ordered that the sentence for shooting with intent be served after the life term.

'75 Corn Output To Be Up 34%

Despite a 2% decline from the October forecast, Nebraska's corn harvest this year was pegged Monday at 87 bushels per acre by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in its monthly report.

Total corn production for the state was forecast at 508.9 million bushels, 34% above last year's drought-stricken crop. Yield per acre last year was 68 bushels per acre.

This month's prediction for drops in the corn, soybean and dry bean crop outputs apparently reflects the extremely dry October weather in the state, agricultural observers said.

Irrigated corn production was forecast at a record 368.5 million bushels, an increase of 17% over last year and 16% higher than in 1973. The yield was forecast at 117 bushels per acre, down three bushels from Oct. 1 due to larger harvest losses and lower final yields.

Dryland Output Doubles

Dryland corn production was forecast at 140.4 million bushels, more than double the 1974 crop. The dryland corn yield of 52 bushels would be the lowest since 1970, not including last year, according to Doug Murfield, state statistician of the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics.

Acres intended for the corn harvest this year were 5.4 million, 4% more than last year but 1% below 1973's figure, Murfield pointed out.

Acreage for harvest of irrigated corn was a record 3,150,000 acres this year, Murfield disclosed.

Based on Nov. 1 conditions, the state's grain sorghum production was forecast at 11.5 million bushels, unchanged from the Oct. 1 forecast, but up 58% from 1974 and still 25% below 1973. jThe yield of 54 bushels per acre was. also unchanged from last month and was 21 bushels above last year.

Due to ideal weather conditions, the grain sorghum harvest was nearing completion statewide as of Nov. 1, Murfield reported.

Soybean production was forecast at 33.2 million bushels, 16% higher than last year, but 9% below 1973. The average yield per acre of 27 bushels was down one bushel from last month's forecast and three bushels higher than last year.

The soybean harvest was virtually complete in all areas of the state by Nov. 1.

Dry Beans Down

Dry bean production was forecast at 1,947,000 cwt., down 12% from last year and 6% below the Oct. 1 forecast.

Sugar beet production was predicted at 1,702,000 tons, 23% higher than last year and unchanged from the Oct. 1 estimate.

Meanwhile, in its weekly crop-weather report, the division also said weather conditions continue to be ideal for fall harvest.

The state's wheat condition declined slightly from a week ago. Of the counties reporting, 30% assess the condition as poor, 63% as fair and 7% as good.

Reports still indicate spotty stands and inadequate growth, and some fields with plants drying up due to the lack of moisture.

Corn harvest made good progress during the past week and is now over 95% completed. Some areas are still reporting that plants are too dry, causing problems in ear droppage and stalk breakage.

Pasture and range feed supplies were short in 89% of the reporting counties.

Rain Helps Wheat

Portions of southeast Nebraska received some moisture last week, helping to sprout some wheat and further develop established stands, the report said.

Although topsoil moisture improved slightly last week, it is still 94% short, while a subsoil moisture shortage exists in all counties, the division disclosed. A year ago topsoil was 59% short, subsoil 97% short in the state.

Moisture received throughout the state during the past week was topped by Norfolk's 1.45 inches. Other reports included Omaha .73, Grand Island .71, Lincoln .49, Burwell .31 and North Platte .01.

Corn Crop Plenty To Meet Demands

Washington (UPI) — The Agriculture Department Monday estimated the 1975 corn crop at a record 5.804 billion bushels, backing up administration forecasts that there will be enough grain to permit more sales to Russia while holding down inflation in American food prices.

The corn crop estimate was 66 million bushels above last month's forecast and 25% above last year's short crop.

Analysts said the crop would meet all predicted domestic and export needs with enough left over to increase carryover reserve supplies next fall.

If the estimate holds, corn production will exceed the previous record of 5.643 billion bushels in 1973.

Total production of all crops was estimated at 122% of the 1967 average, an all-time record.

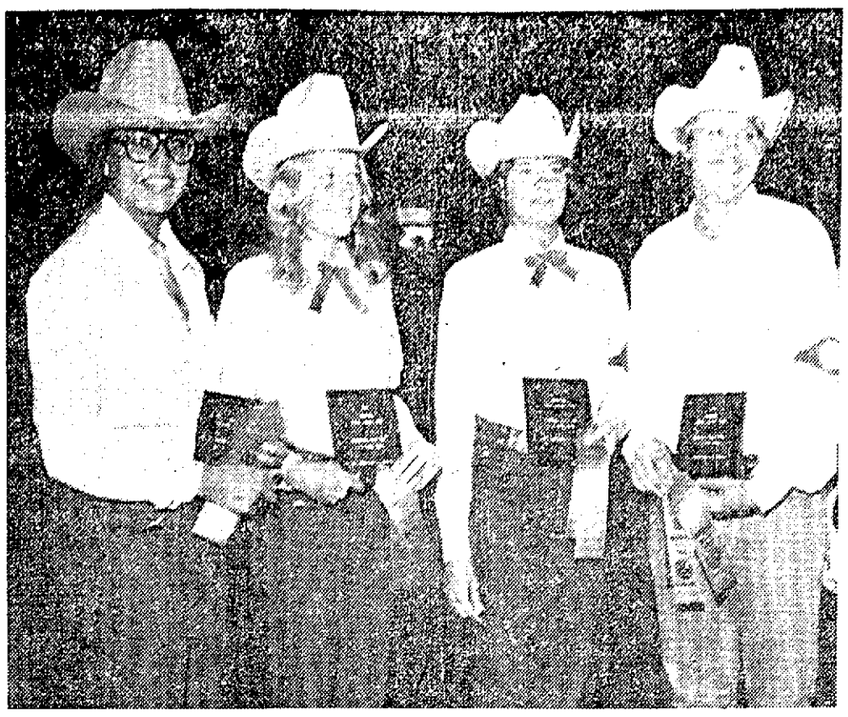

The November crop report also noted, with Thanksgiving approaching, consumers will have fewer cranberries than last year. The harvest was estimated at 2.087 million barrels compared with 1974's crop of 2.122 million barrels.

No new forecast was issued this month for wheat production, estimated in October at a record 2.138 billion bushels, enough to meet foreseen demand with a small overrun to begin rebuilding the nation's bare-bones carryover reserve.

Corn sales to Russia from the 1975 crop already have reached 8.7 million metric tons, equal to 339 million bushels, and more are expected.

Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz predicted recently that Soviet orders for corn and other grains could reach an eventual total of about 17 million tons, including contracts already reported for 13.1 million tons.

Despite these and other big export sales, agriculture economists say supplies are big enough to hold retail food prices in the first half of 1976 to an increase equaling a 4 or 5% annual rate by spurring expanded meat and poultry production. That is about half the 9% gain estimated for this year and even farther below the 14.5% food inflation rate of 1973 and 1974.

LOMR Lays Off Seven Due To Cuts In Budget

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

The Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation (LOMR) will lay off seven people and not fill two empty positions in another attempt to live within a reduced budget.

The Lancaster County Board Monday approved position cuts which will save LOMR about $6,100 each month. The cuts were recommended last week by the LOMR Advisory Committee.

The cuts include two administrative clerical positions, one position in vocational services, a vocational evaluator, one position in the home management program, one coordinator and a coordinator assistant in the life skills training program, a recreational therapist and a half-time psychologist consultant.

An aide position in the human development program was retained by the County Board, despite a LOMR administrative suggestion to cut it. The human development program lost eight full-time teachers during another layoff in September.

For more than an hour, LOMR employes and some parents of clients argued against specific cuts and several suggested additional cuts in administrative salaries or positions.

But commissioners pointed out that under the new personnel system, individual salaries could not be cut, that either there had to be across the board reductions or elimination of positions.

"We're not very pleased with any of the cuts. We know it's going to hurt the program," said Chairman Jan Gauger. But the responsibility lies with the Governor and the state Legislature to allow the mental retardation programs to run a deficit this year, she said.

The funding shortages were caused when the State Welfare Department cut back the amount of federal funds going into the programs for mentally retarded individuals. Without special permission, the programs cannot operate in the red.

After sitting through employe and parent pleas, Jerry Gibson, director of Lancaster Manor, suggested that other county agencies might be willing to look into their budgets and see if anything could be cut and the money transferred to the LOMR budget this year.

And Commissioner Bob Colin, who has been opposed to some past human service expenditures asked, "Why don't we cut some of the other programs and not cut this one?"

The possibility that the county take over a portion of the deficit for this year using revenue sharing funds, has not been raised since Robert Smith, LOMR Director, first asked for board consideration of funding a deficit several months ago.

The board directed Smith to first see where cuts might have to be made.

"No one has ever suggested it (spending more county money or revenue sharing funds), and I'm surprised no one has," said Commissioner Bruce Hamilton after the meeting.

In the past the board has frowned on spending any revenue sharing funds for ongoing programs, said Chairman Gauger. The board has, however, spent revenue funds for Lancaster Manor salaries and used some funds to offset a deficit in a day care program for nine months.

County Gets Flak For 'Just Trying To Help'

The County Board thought they were trying to help employes. But instead of a pat on the back, what the commissioners got was much flak.

In an effort to raise employe fringe benefits, the County Board several months ago asked its insurance consultants to upgrade the employes' health insurance package and rebid it.

The bid results came in last week, and in a hurriedly organized meeting Friday afternoon county employes and department heads were told the options, plan costs and the consultants' recommendation that the county take the lowest bid by Blue Cross/Blue Shield.

But employe concerns over the short notice, the possible cost of the new plan and the technical problems of converting to a new company on short notice surfaced at the board's Monday meeting.

The board, which in the past has paid 67% of the employe's health insurance premium, did not budget for a big premium jump. And Monday commissioners did not know how much the county could pay on the new plan.

"How much are you going to pay; that's the crust of the whole thing," said County Engineer Marv Nuernberger.

"That point is crystal clear in my head," said Commissioner Bruce Hamilton after the money question was raised a half dozen times.

And Hamilton, never a fan of tedious meetings, remarked near the end of the more than one-hour debate, "We wasted $1,000 hiring consultants to come in and give our employes a better insurance plan."

The board recessed the meeting to Thursday at 10 a.m., in order to look into the money question and the technical problems of converting the payroll deductions from one company to another.

New Pollution Regulations Won't Affect Small Feedlot

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Reliable sources in Washington, D.C., indicate that a new regulation expected to be published by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) will not include any major changes in regulations affecting small feedlots' control of manure.

Nebraska's regulations, administered by the State Department of Environmental Control (DEC) already require that livestock operations do not pollute regardless of their size.

"I don't think we can expect any changes in the state because DEC already checks all feedlots regardless of size," said a spokesman for the Soil Conservation Service, which designs waste control facilities for small farmers.

A source within EPA indicated that an early draft of the proposed regulation would alter the definition of a point pollution source rather than change the requirement for smaller feedlots with less than 1,000 head of cattle capacity.

"The only change I see coming is in regard to a fish pond operation which must be regulated," the spokesman said.

The new change in the EPA regulation was forced on the agency because it lost a case filed against its exemption in the federal court in Washington by an environmental group.

"The change in the definition of a point source of pollution apparently meets the criteria set by the judge as a justification for the exemption of the smaller livestock operations," the source said.

Paul Johnson, executive secretary of the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association, said he expected to see the new regulation published this week.

"There have been four proposals circulated. We won't know what the final regulation will be until we see the Federal Register, but some of the proposals are an improvement on the present regulation," he said.

"The Federal Register may publish the new regulation on Thursday. The court order said the agency had to have the regulation prepared on Monday but set no deadline for publication," a Washington source reported.

Other sources in Washington had suggested that the agency would require even the smallest feedlot operator or any livestock owner to construct a manure management facility with costs approaching an average of $100 per animal.

Veteran Campaigner Supports New Platform

By TOM COOK
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Blair — Margaret Chase Smith is using the 33 years' experience she gained campaigning successfully for Congress in Maine to drum up support for a candidate of different sorts.

Her platform is a rejuvenated faith in democracy in the United States, and she took her message to Dana College in Blair Monday.

"Government is what the American people make it. If they don't participate 100%, a very small minority will do it for them," she said.

Politics is not a dirty word, she told faculty and students, and the vote is still a meaningful tool if used wisely.

Integrity and background are the most important qualities a voter should look for in a candidate, Mrs. Smith said, and a political record is more important than a promise.

Mrs. Smith, who supported Richard Nixon for the presidency, said some of the political tactics that led to his demise in Watergate had been used before.

"But nothing quite as brazen as through the Nixon administration, especially the Committee to Re-Elect the President.

"The Republican National Committee was completely forgotten and eliminated (in the campaign), and that was a very serious offense," she said.

Big government and bureaucracy were created because the American people demanded them, Mrs. Smith said.

"There is far too much overspending. Until every human being in the United States decides to do something about it . . . and gets back to sane living and a regeneration of the American will . . . there is no hope (of eliminating them)," she said.

Mrs. Smith said she is optimistic that young Americans are awakening to the problems confronting the country.

"You've given me the feeling that you've finally come to realize all this will be in your laps," she told a group of students. "You're realizing you're going to have to meet the challenge — and you will."

As part of the national Woodrow Wilson Visiting Fellow program, Mrs. Smith and her executive assistant, Maj. Gen. William Lewis, will be on the Blair campus until Friday.

Mrs. Smith will give a public address titled "Leadership" Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., in the Dana Hall of Science Auditorium.

The veteran Republican, who in 1964 became the first woman placed in nomination for president by a major political party, will also speak on women in politics 4 p.m. Thursday in the Parnassus room.

Veteran Campaigner Supports New Platform

By TOM COOK
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Blair — Margaret Chase Smith is using the 33 years' experience she gained campaigning successfully for Congress in Maine to drum up support for a candidate of different sorts.

Her platform is a rejuvenated faith in democracy in the United States, and she took her message to Dana College in Blair Monday.

"Government is what the American people make it. If they don't participate 100%, a very small minority will do it for them," she said.

Politics is not a dirty word, she told faculty and students, and the vote is still a meaningful tool if used wisely.

Integrity and background are the most important qualities a voter should look for in a candidate, Mrs. Smith said, and a political record is more important than a promise.

Mrs. Smith, who supported Richard Nixon for the presidency, said some of the political tactics that led to his demise in Watergate had been used before.

"But nothing quite as brazen as through the Nixon administration, especially the Committee to Re-Elect the President.

"The Republican National Committee was completely forgotten and eliminated (in the campaign), and that was a very serious offense," she said.

Big government and bureaucracy were created because the American people demanded them, Mrs. Smith said.

"There is far too much overspending. Until every human being in the United States decides to do something about it . . . and gets back to sane living and a regeneration of the American will . . . there is no hope (of eliminating them)," she said.

Mrs. Smith said she is optimistic that young Americans are awakening to the problems confronting the country.

"You've given me the feeling that you've finally come to realize all this will be in your laps," she told a group of students. "You're realizing you're going to have to meet the challenge — and you will."

As part of the national Woodrow Wilson Visiting Fellow program, Mrs. Smith and her executive assistant, Maj. Gen. William Lewis, will be on the Blair campus until Friday.

Mrs. Smith will give a public address titled "Leadership" Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., in the Dana Hall of Science Auditorium.

The veteran Republican, who in 1964 became the first woman placed in nomination for president by a major political party, will also speak on women in politics 4 p.m. Thursday in the Parnassus room.

Good To Head Chamber Leaders

Grand Island (UPI) — Dick Good, executive secretary of the Grand Island Chamber of Commerce, has been elected chairman-elect of the American Chamber of Commerce Executives, it was announced Monday.

Good will serve as chairman-elect of the 2,500-member organization until he becomes chairman in October of next year. The group said Good's chamber management and community service "has prepared him for his new and demanding leadership role."

The organization serves members throughout the United States and Canada.

Decorated T-Shirts Enduring Fad

By WES ALBERS
Star Staff Writer

To Harold Hoage, whose House of Lettering shop, 142 N. 48th, specializes in sportswear and jackets, those T-shirts with the funny slogans or eye-catching designs are "novelties."

Or, to put it another way, "junk."

But people, especially young ones, are wearing that junk just about everywhere but to church. Businesses are using T-shirts for advertising. And the people who sell them are scratching their heads, wondering when it will all end.

Even Hoage says that if it's a fad, "it's been a fad for a long time."

Lettered T-shirts first gained popularity in 1968, according to Sirk Enterprises president Rick Hollingsworth, and the market has been growing ever since. Last year, T-shirts were 25%-30% of the total shirt market, he said.

Reading Chests

Today, the student who strikes out across campus for a study break is apt to find himself reading all the way. People's chests everywhere are proclaiming everything from the traditional "Keep on Truckin' " to the more defiant "Go to Hell World, I'm a Senior."

Sirk Enterprises, a Lincoln-based wholesale T-shirt company, started in a Scottsbluff basement in 1965, back when skateboards were the rage, Hollingsworth said.

Today it has franchises in Park City, Utah; Estes Park, Colo.; Vail, Colo.; Steamboat Springs, Colo., and Jackson, Wyo.

The company's first big seller — a T-shirt emblazoned with game scores from the Cornhuskers' 1971 national championship season — had its backers "trying to buy up every red and white T-shirt we could get our hands on," Hollingsworth said.

Now Sirk has more than 200 standard designs and adds approximately 60 new ones a year.

More Variety Now

"It used to be that anything referring to beer or dope was a good seller, but today's that's not necessarily true," he said. "Today you see almost everything from four-letter words to graphic designs."

The range of T-shirt subjects lacks rhyme or reason but not imagination.

Rock groups. Porky Pig. W. C. Fields. Tweetie Pie. Groucho Marx. Movie stars. Your favorite football team's helmet. Let's Boogie. Go Big Red. A simple rainbow peeking out from under a question mark. And, of course, the inevitable "Jaws" spinoffs.

The coming thing? T-shirts featuring the front page of a newspaper — perhaps headling your favorite disaster.

A good seller at Richman Gordman, 4600 Vine, according to salesman Ken Westerhold, is a T-shirt picturing a brutish character with the caption, "Sure I Raise Hell. So What?"

In addition to stocking pre-printed T-shirts, that store also uses a heat transfer method that allows customers to design their own T-shirts, he said.

"You'd be surprised at what they come up with," he said. "You can learn a lot about people that way."

Successful designs are a hit-and-miss thing, Hollingsworth said, but chances for success are best if they incorporate a funny caption, good artwork or an appeal to a special interest.

Bars, dormitories, radio stations, clubs, gas stations — almost all of them have gotten into the act, either to promote togetherness or for the benefits that come from turning people into walking billboards.

"Almost any time a group congregates with a common interest, they think a T-shirt is an appropriate item," Hollingsworth said.

No Age Limit

Westerhold said most of his store's sales are to people in grade school, junior high or high school. But people who grew up wearing T-shirts don't necessarily give them up when they get out of school, said Hollingsworth, who putters around after work in an Eagles T-shirt.

Some say it's a fad. Some say its self-expression. To Hollingsworth, it boils down to one thing: "Plain white T-shirts don't have class."

It's Not Worth Argument

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem with my mother-in-law. She and my husband believe that it is a matter of "respect" to let her sit in the front next to her son when we're in the car together. Of course that means I have to sit in the back.

I have tried to tell my husband that this has nothing to do with respect and that I should sit next to him. It burns me up, and they both know it.

His mother is 47 and has no disabilities, so there is no good reason for her to sit next to my husband.

I always thought that once married, your spouse becomes the most important person in your life and his family comes next.

It's gotten to the point where if his mother is going along, I just refuse to go. She doesn't drive and won't learn, so you can see that this poses a big problem.

There is no use talking to her because she already knows how I feel. She just thinks I should show her respect and get in the back.

What do you think is the respectable and proper thing to do?

MISERABLE IN BACK

DEAR MISERABLE: When push comes to shove, you should defer to her, not because your husband wants you to, but because she is your elder. Even though she should not have demanded to sit next to her son, since she did, you should have yielded gracefully. Refusing to go along is childish. Knock it off.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 72-year-old widow. I am very active, and believe me, I have all my buttons. My single daughter, Donna, and I live together.

I like people, but my oldest daughter who is married and lives happily with her husband told me that when Donna has company, I should excuse myself and give Donna and her guest privacy. This house is half mine.

Abby, when people reach a certain age, don't they belong to the human race any longer?

WITHHOLD MY NAME

DEAR WITHHOLD: The issue is not age — it's privacy.

You need not disappear the moment Donna has company and remain out of sight until the guest leaves, but neither should you join the party the whole time.

Use some judgment, Mother. Your older daughter has a point.

DEAR ABBY: My 14-year-old daughter recently spent a month with her father in Colorado. He and I have been divorced since she was 6-years-old.

She closed a recent letter to me with the following words: "When I was born it was a wonderful thing because I grew up and you were there. I just want you to know that I couldn't ask for a better friend than you, Mommy. I love you!"

Abby, I am a witness to the fact that all children who grow up with only one parent do not go bad.

I would like to tell mothers all over the world that if they treat their children with respect and love, they will almost always make you proud of them.

YOUNG BLACK MOM

DEAR MOM: Thank you for a beautiful letter. It made my day.

DEAR ABBY: I can't forget the letter from OLD FOOL, the 64-year-old woman who considers herself "respectable" but who is having an affair with a married man whose wife is now her "best friend."

You should have reminded her of the Chinese proverb, "One foot cannot stand on two boats."

As discreet or cunning as her married lover may be, he is bound to fall in the drink sooner or later, and he's the one who has something to lose — not she.

He is making a mockery of marriage, and she is making a mockery of friendship, pretending to be best friends with her lover's wife. Meanwhile, OLD FOOL is secure in her retirement with family and friends, and her travels around kill time.

I hope this married man's wife is still around to care for him if he develops a lingering illness. OLD FOOL will probably be cruising in the Mediterranean. Alone.

STRONG STOMACH

DEAR STRONG: Could be. But another reader takes an opposing view. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: To the woman who calls herself OLD FOOL: There are countless numbers of people doing the same thing. You had the courage to write. Bless you!

Pinball: Once You're Hooked, You're Hooked

By DEB GRAY
Star Staff Writer

It began in a bowling alley, when Bob Conner was 4 years old.

He had just bumped into a man who was hunched over a machine. The man was upset, of course, for his rhythm was now ruined. But, for Conner, it was the beginning of an obsession. He had been sucked into a sense explosion.

There was so much going on. A silver ball zigged and zagged through an obstacle course of bumpers and kickers. Lights flashed, bells rang. First Zap!, then Ka-chunk!, and the final Schwock! as the player won the next round on the house.

Conner, who is now 15, spent his formative years perfecting a game that, according to Harold Hill in "The Music Man," led the youth of River City on the "road to perdition" — which starts with "P" and rhymes with "T" and that stands for — in this case — pinball.

Pinball players have been stereotyped: tatooed street punks, dangling cigarettes from the lips, who lead naive boys into a self-destructive trip that ends in juvenile court.

Some Places Off-Limits

Part of that image still exists. Rob's mother, Mrs. Marian Conner, said she has placed some playing areas — like bowling alleys, pool halls and bars — off-limits to her son. Some older people who go to these places, she said, have snared younger boys into betting sprees.

"I don't think it's the game itself that people object to," Mrs. Conner said. "It's the atmosphere surrounding the machine. An individual is bound to meet up with some unsavory characters at some of these places."

There are hundreds of varieties of pinball machines around, with as large a variety of machine titles. The names range from the blase to the exotic: Tunnel of Love, Far Out, Bally's Fireball, King Kook, Superstar.

Each machine — even those of the same make — is different. Since each machine is a new challenge, some people narrow their playing field. Their goal: to be conquerer and undisputed master of one machine.

The complex games, Conner said, are Spanish Eyes and the Wizard, which was inspired by the movie "Tommy." Triple Play and King Pin are among the easiest.

"I can tell just by looking at a machine what chance I have of winning on it," Conner said. "If it's really complicated — with a lot of flashers and bumpers — it's going to be hard to beat that machine."

Conner's speciality is the Skylab. He once held the unofficial record for the Skylab at a bowling alley he no longer frequents. On a machine that awarded a free game after 122,000 points, Conner scored 312,000.

There's a lot to learn about pinball, Conner said.

Timing Vitally Important

First there are the flippers, which are operated by a button on each side of the machine. Push the button and the flipper flips, shooting the ball back on the playing field. Push the button a split second too soon, or one too late, and it's lost. The chance for several thousand more points is lost forever.

The next advancement is what pinball players call body English. A nudge of the hip here, a quick jerk of the right arm there, and the ball will bounce off the wall and into the playing field, not down the exit chute.

According to people who have spent a fistful of dollars in penny arcades, the crux of pinball technique is gentle, smooth moves. Rash, slam-bang motion will tilt the machine. And nothing, they said, is more maddening that blowing a hot streak with a sudden tilt.

To Conner, pinball is a one-to-one battle — a man against a machine. It is not designed for competition, he said, because all entrants must use the same machine — one that no one has played before — to have a fair contest.

Besides, he added, since people take losses more personally in competition, it's not as fun.

Conner said his addiction is a lifetime affair.

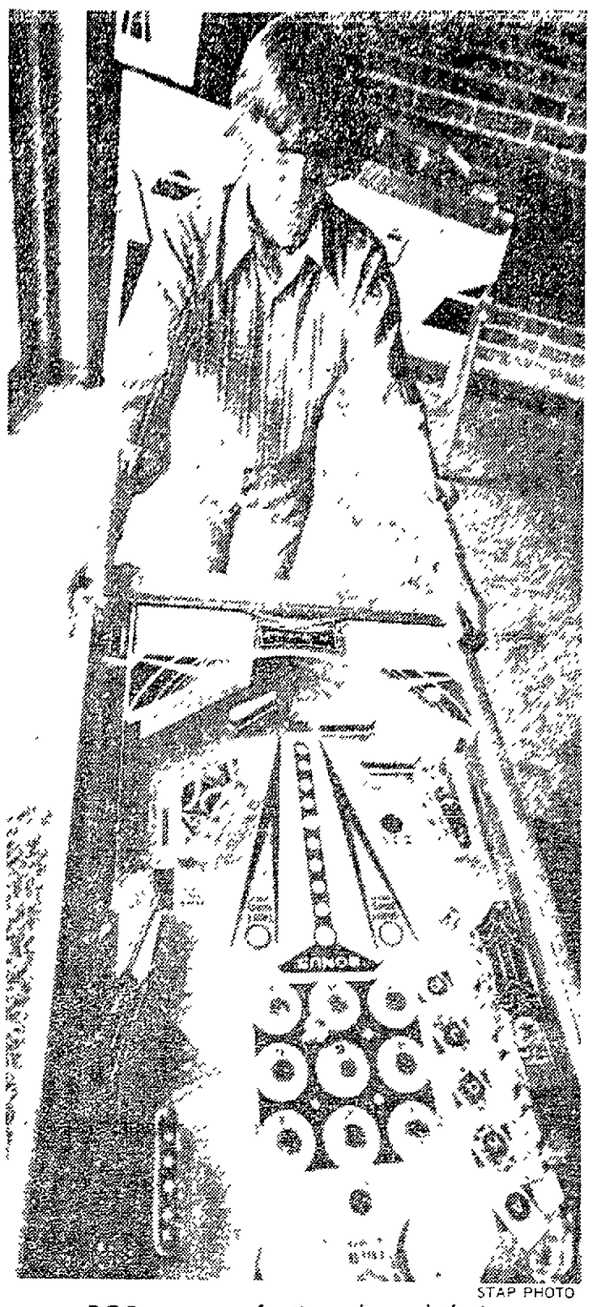

He's Hooked For Life

"There's a feeling about it," he said. "I don't think I could ever give it up."

He mentioned the final sequence in the movie "Tommy," where Tommy's disillusioned disciples revolt, destroying hundreds of pinball machines.

"It's a good thing that movie was made in Britain," he said, "because if they were breaking a machine I had played . . . like the Skylab at Parkway Lanes . . . that would be killing somebody. Something I look up to."

"Because if you play it long enough as a machine, then it becomes more than that. It's something that you've known for a long time. It's something that gets into you."

Pinball Machines Weathered Efforts To Have Them Banned

It's been a 25-year battle for survival, but pinball is now in Lincoln to stay.

Pinball wizards abound throughout the city. They play in diverse atmospheres, ranging from the D Street Market, 23rd and D, to the Nebraska Union.

Pinball manufactures fun. For a quarter a person gets a chance to rack up enormous scores. If he scores enough points — between 4,000 and 125,000, depending on the machine — he wins a free game.

The free game subjected pinball machines to court cases and law enforcement hassles that started in the early 1950's. According to a 1953 Nebraska Supreme Court decision, playing for a free game constituted gambling.

Pinball machines were considered a moral dilemma, more easily legislated against than swearing or staying out all night. During the '50s, a crusade to "sterilize" the state's bars and bowling alleys almost squelched the game for good.

It wasn't just the free game that aroused controversy. Some machine owners awarded cash prizes to winners. A crusade started: wipe out the machines, some thought, and the pay-off problem would be solved.

Former Atty. Gen. C. S. Beck announced in 1951 that there were "possibly two or three" one-ball machines left in the state. Sgt. Walter Wilson, then head of Omaha's police morals squad, announced that all pinball machines had disappeared from Douglas County.

The ruling against pinball machines was amended in 1973. According to LB360, coin-operated machines used only for amusement, where the game was replayed at no additional cost, were legal.

There are explanations, but no obvious reasons for pinball's longevity. Some say that pinball is simply a fun game. And no matter what, you can't keep a good game down.

One pinball dealer said that the Who's rock opera "Tommy" — a story about a deaf, dumb and blind pinball player — added glamor to the game.

Licenses Put Money Into City's Treasury

Pinball machines make money — not only for the machine's owner, but also for the city treasury.

According to Asst. City Atty. James Faimon, coin-operated machines that are used for amusement must be licensed in the city clerk's office. A license costs $80 for the first machine. For each additional machine, a license is $50.

Both the owner of the machine and the proprietor of the place where the machine is located are liable if they don't have the license, Faimon said.

Police have the right to confiscate unlicensed machines But Mrs. Romona Goeschel, license inspector in the city clerk's office, said she knew of no case where this has been done.

Mrs. Goeschel said her staff is able to keep unlicensed machines at a minimum.

"If we send a letter to one place telling the owner he has to pay this license fee, he'll often squeal on other people who haven't paid," she said. "We've tracked down several people this way."

Mrs. Goeschel said she and three other people go out to inspect machines. To places where she doesn't want to go, she sends in the vice squad.

The city made $13,300 from amusement machines last year. This money is placed in the city's general fund.

But Lincoln could have made more. Mrs. Goeschel said the money came from 49 locations in the city.

Charlie Hauptman of Mike's Music estimated that between 200 to 300 locations in Lincoln have machines.

It Takes A Lot Of Quarters To Pay Off $1,300 Machine

It sounds like an easy get-rich-quick scheme: put in a pinball machine, collect all its quarters for a month, then pay off the machine.

After that, everything is profit.

But according to Charlie Hauptman of Mike's Music — one of the pinball suppliers in Lincoln — pinball machines do not make as much money as people think.

Pinball machines are expensive. They now cost about $1,300, but the price is continually rising.

"There's a lot of overhead involved," Hauptman said. "They break down a lot, with kids hitting them and everything. They're no big money thing."

Opening lead - jack of hearts.

Many players imagine that executing a squeeze is something beyond their capabilities. But the truth is that most squeezes are easy enough to accomplish and, in fact, just about all that declarer has to do is cash his natural tricks and, presto, the squeeze materializes by itself.

Consider this deal where South, rightly or wrongly, finds himself in seven notrump. He wins the heart lead with the ace and notes that he has only twelve tricks — with apparently no chance of scoring a thirteenth trick.

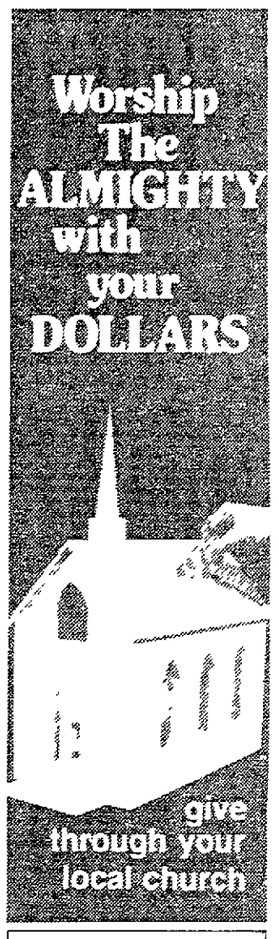

But if South is at all familiar with squeezes, he also notes that he has all the tricks but one — and it is this expression "all the tricks but one" that triggers the thought in his mind that trick number thirteen may come from a squeeze.

Actually, South winds up making the grand slam by normal play — even if he doesn't know the difference between a squeeze and a Wiener schnitzel.

He wins the heart lead with the ace, cashes four spades and three diamonds, and poor West finds it impossible to make a suitable discard on the last diamond trick from a holding of the 10-9-7 of hearts and Q-10-6 of clubs. A heart discard hands South an extra heart trick, while a club discard hands dummy an extra club trick.

The squeeze succeeds whether or not South is aware of the squeeze possibilities. If he is squeeze-conscious, he hopes the defender who was dealt most of the missing hearts also has most of the missing clubs. If South is not squeeze-conscious, the good Lord takes care of him anyhow!

Pinball: Once You're Hooked, You're Hooked

By DEB GRAY
Star Staff Writer

It began in a bowling alley, when Bob Conner was 4 years old.

He had just bumped into a man who was hunched over a machine. The man was upset, of course, for his rhythm was now ruined. But, for Conner, it was the beginning of an obsession. He had been sucked into a sense explosion.

There was so much going on. A silver ball zigged and zagged through an obstacle course of bumpers and kickers. Lights flashed, bells rang. First Zap!, then Ka-chunk!, and the final Schwock! as the player won the next round on the house.

Conner, who is now 15, spent his formative years perfecting a game that, according to Harold Hill in "The Music Man," led the youth of River City on the "road to perdition" — which starts with "P" and rhymes with "T" and that stands for — in this case — pinball.

Pinball players have been stereotyped: tatooed street punks, dangling cigarettes from the lips, who lead naive boys into a self-destructive trip that ends in juvenile court.

Some Places Off-Limits

Part of that image still exists. Rob's mother, Mrs. Marian Conner, said she has placed some playing areas — like bowling alleys, pool halls and bars — off-limits to her son. Some older people who go to these places, she said, have snared younger boys into betting sprees.

"I don't think it's the game itself that people object to," Mrs. Conner said. "It's the atmosphere surrounding the machine. An individual is bound to meet up with some unsavory characters at some of these places."

There are hundreds of varieties of pinball machines around, with as large a variety of machine titles. The names range from the blase to the exotic: Tunnel of Love, Far Out, Bally's Fireball, King Kook, Superstar.

Each machine — even those of the same make — is different. Since each machine is a new challenge, some people narrow their playing field. Their goal: to be conquerer and undisputed master of one machine.

The complex games, Conner said, are Spanish Eyes and the Wizard, which was inspired by the movie "Tommy." Triple Play and King Pin are among the easiest.

"I can tell just by looking at a machine what chance I have of winning on it," Conner said. "If it's really complicated — with a lot of flashers and bumpers — it's going to be hard to beat that machine."

Conner's speciality is the Skylab. He once held the unofficial record for the Skylab at a bowling alley he no longer frequents. On a machine that awarded a free game after 122,000 points, Conner scored 312,000.

There's a lot to learn about pinball, Conner said.

Timing Vitally Important

First there are the flippers, which are operated by a button on each side of the machine. Push the button and the flipper flips, shooting the ball back on the playing field. Push the button a split second too soon, or one too late, and it's lost. The chance for several thousand more points is lost forever.

The next advancement is what pinball players call body English. A nudge of the hip here, a quick jerk of the right arm there, and the ball will bounce off the wall and into the playing field, not down the exit chute.

According to people who have spent a fistful of dollars in penny arcades, the crux of pinball technique is gentle, smooth moves. Rash, slam-bang motion will tilt the machine. And nothing, they said, is more maddening that blowing a hot streak with a sudden tilt.

To Conner, pinball is a one-to-one battle — a man against a machine. It is not designed for competition, he said, because all entrants must use the same machine — one that no one has played before — to have a fair contest.

Besides, he added, since people take losses more personally in competition, it's not as fun.

Conner said his addiction is a lifetime affair.

He's Hooked For Life

"There's a feeling about it," he said. "I don't think I could ever give it up."

He mentioned the final sequence in the movie "Tommy," where Tommy's disillusioned disciples revolt, destroying hundreds of pinball machines.

"It's a good thing that movie was made in Britain," he said, "because if they were breaking a machine I had played . . . like the Skylab at Parkway Lanes . . . that would be killing somebody. Something I look up to."

"Because if you play it long enough as a machine, then it becomes more than that. It's something that you've known for a long time. It's something that gets into you."

ROB . . . perfecting the subtleties.

Pinball Machines Weathered Efforts To Have Them Banned

It's been a 25-year battle for survival, but pinball is now in Lincoln to stay.

Pinball wizards abound throughout the city. They play in diverse atmospheres, ranging from the D Street Market, 23rd and D, to the Nebraska Union.

Pinball manufactures fun. For a quarter a person gets a chance to rack up enormous scores. If he scores enough points — between 4,000 and 125,000, depending on the machine — he wins a free game.

The free game subjected pinball machines to court cases and law enforcement hassles that started in the early 1950's. According to a 1953 Nebraska Supreme Court decision, playing for a free game constituted gambling.

Pinball machines were considered a moral dilemma, more easily legislated against than swearing or staying out all night. During the '50s, a crusade to "sterilize" the state's bars and bowling alleys almost squelched the game for good.

It wasn't just the free game that aroused controversy. Some machine owners awarded cash prizes to winners. A crusade started: wipe out the machines, some thought, and the pay-off problem would be solved.

Former Atty. Gen. C. S. Beck announced in 1951 that there were "possibly two or three" one-ball machines left in the state. Sgt. Walter Wilson, then head of Omaha's police morals squad, announced that all pinball machines had disappeared from Douglas County.

The ruling against pinball machines was amended in 1973. According to LB360, coin-operated machines used only for amusement, where the game was replayed at no additional cost, were legal.

There are explanations, but no obvious reasons for pinball's longevity. Some say that pinball is simply a fun game. And no matter what, you can't keep a good game down.

One pinball dealer said that the Who's rock opera "Tommy" — a story about a deaf, dumb and blind pinball player — added glamor to the game.

Licenses Put Money Into City's Treasury

Pinball machines make money — not only for the machine's owner, but also for the city treasury.

According to Asst. City Atty. James Faimon, coin-operated machines that are used for amusement must be licensed in the city clerk's office. A license costs $80 for the first machine. For each additional machine, a license is $50.

Both the owner of the machine and the proprietor of the place where the machine is located are liable if they don't have the license, Faimon said.

Police have the right to confiscate unlicensed machines. But Mrs. Romona Goeschel, license inspector in the city clerk's office, said she knew of no case where this has been done.

Mrs. Goeschel said her staff is able to keep unlicensed machines at a minimum.

"If we send a letter to one place telling the owner he has to pay this license fee, he'll often squeal on other people who haven't paid," she said. "We've tracked down several people this way."

Mrs. Goeschel said she and three other people go out to inspect machines. To places where she doesn't want to go, she sends in the vice squad.

The city made $13,300 from amusement machines last year. This money is placed in the city's general fund.

But Lincoln could have made more. Mrs. Goeschel said the money came from 49 locations in the city.

Charlie Hauptman of Mike's Music estimated that between 200 to 300 locations in Lincoln have machines.

It Takes A Lot Of Quarters To Pay Off $1,300 Machine

It sounds like an easy get-rich-quick scheme: put in a pinball machine, collect all its quarters for a month, then pay off the machine.

After that, everything is profit.

But according to Charlie Hauptman of Mike's Music — one of the pinball suppliers in Lincoln — pinball machines do not make as much money as people think.

Pinball machines are expensive. They now cost about $1,300, but the price is continually rising.

"There's a lot of overhead involved," Hauptman said. "They break down a lot, with kids hitting them and everything. They're no big money thing."

"A recent national survey concerning the quality of life in American metropolitan areas, which included the environment and recreational facilities, placed Lincoln third in the nation among 95 cities of comparable size. Tourists traveling across Nebraska on I-80 marvel not only at the green and golden fields, but also the chain of beautiful interstate lakes.

Film Helpful For Coaches

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Lincoln East coach Lee Zentic and Omaha Westside coach Don Johnson spent last Saturday entirely differently.

But Sunday was the same kind of day for both coaches — film, film and more film.

The two, whose teams collide Friday night at UNO for the state Class A football championship, must be starting to feel like overworked projectionists.

The two schools traded films of their final five regular season games.

Westside's coaching staff worked from noon to 6 p.m. Sunday, breaking down East's film.

Zentic started breaking down Westside film at 1:30 p.m. Sunday. His coaching staff joined him at 7 and they worked another 2½ hours.

Bread and Butter

"Film evaluation is the bread and butter of a football program," says Zentic. "You use it to scout, to teach, to illustrate and to help your athletes get scholarships."

Johnson notes "you can't put a percentage on how important a film is, but it's invaluable as a teaching aid. A film can't lie. It's the best method you have to correct mistakes."

Film is not available to Lincoln teams every week, although Zentic has lobbied for what he considers a necessity, not a luxury.

"I've never had coach (Tom) Osborne write a letter, pointing out how important it is for a program to film each game," says Zentic.

"Grand Island uses 600 feet each game and even gets film broken down on offense and defense," he points out. "Westside uses about 500 feet. We can do ours on 400 feet for about $50 a game."

Both Zentic and Johnson have film available to their players no later than Monday.

Psychological Game

"I think you have to use some discretion how you use film," says Zentic. "There's some psychological considerations. For instance, it's not always best to show a team playing poorly when you know they're a much better ball club."

Johnson holds nothing back. "We're quite honest with what we show our kids," he says. "We like for them to see the other team's mistakes."

With modular scheduling, film is easily accessible to the athletes. During free study periods, players can run the projectors themselves.

"We review film almost until game time," says Johnson. "We start a one-hour taping period about 4 o'clock and reserve 5 to 6 o'clock for more film study."

East also uses film evaluation right up to the day of the game. "That shows just how important film is to your program," Zentic says.

Before launching into the long-term film study of each other's teams this week, Zentic and Johnson took different approaches Saturday.

Got Away From Football

"I got away from it all," says Zentic, who worked in his yard and listened to the Nebraska-Kansas State game on radio.

"I cleaned my garden and patio, did some touch up painting and put sand on the strawberries for the winter," he relates. "After church Sunday, I was really ready to dive in again."

Johnson used Saturday as a work day. He started breaking down film at noon, conducted a running and weightlifting practice at 3 p.m. and showed two films to his players.

Westside finished practice about 6 o'clock.

The results of both coaching approaches will be visible Friday night.

Final Prep Ratings After Title Games

In light of this week's state championship prep football matchups, the Sunday Journal and Star is not providing ratings this week.

Final ratings for the season will be published next week.

Judo black belt holder, John Roseberry demonstrates a throw to a student.

Gentle Roseberry Talented

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

John Roseberry is a gentle man.

But inside of the pleasant, calm and charming exterior lies a man that could explode into a blur of speed grace and power that could stop almost anything as quick as you could say "judo."

Roseberry, who heads the Sho-Rei-Kan School of Judo in Lincoln, holds a sixth degree black belt in karate, and was just recently promoted to "Godan" (fifth degree black belt) in judo. He was the first American to be awarded a black belt in both sports, and is the only man in this area of the country with the "Godan".

"When I first started judo in 1955 in England, I did it so I could go out and learn to smoke somebody," Roseberry said. "But after about five years of wanting to go out and get someone, my teachers finally convinced me that there was a better way to go about things."

Roseberry, who was in the U.S. Marine Corps from 1955 to just three years ago, said the attitude helped him get along with himself and others better, and his judo improved.

Roseberry went on to win the following titles. All-Okinawa, Southeastern AAU, All-Service, and gained runner-up spots in the National AAU championships and the 1964 Olympic trials, besides being a player coach on the All-Marine Judo team for the Marine Corps.

"You find that all throughout the judo and karate ranks that the higher the degree of learning or ability the more gentle a person is," Roseberry said. "You might think the reverse, that the tougher a guy got the meaner he would get. But those type of people don't last long in either judo or karate. You don't practice the art to hurt but rather to help yourself and others."

"I let that attitude of using martial arts skills for defense only carry through to my teaching. I have two rules in my school," Roseberry said. "The first is that if you start a fight I don't want you in my school. And the other is that if you lose a fight I don't want you either."

The city of Lincoln gets a good deal with Roseberry. He not only works for the city Parks and Recreation Dept. but also offers self-defense classes on the side for them.

Roseberry is one of the few American judo teachers in the area with a teacher's certificate, which he earned while in Okinawa. "I've been in the sport for 20 years and have just been teaching about the last seven years," Roseberry said. "But there are some teachers that have been in the sports for fewer than six years that should still be students."

Roseberry doesn't feel he has anything over his students though just because he's been with the sport so long. "I would love to be on the other side, with one of them teaching," Roseberry said. "I had a teacher that once told me that after five years, a student is just beginning to learn. And after 10 years he is just beginning to learn. I've been with it 10 years and I'm just beginning to learn."

The reason for the humble attitude Roseberry explains. "You go to some tournaments and see some of these old fellows that can make you look like a baby."

"That's the way judo is," Roseberry said. "You have to get in shape from all the practice it takes to be good. And with judo you use the other person's momentum and strength to your advantage. You win by virtue of your balance and quickness."

"In karate (or empty hands) you use a lot of punches and kicks. It's a lot more offensive than judo, but judo is more practical as a sport," the former All-Marine champion for seven years said. "In judo sport all you have to do is throw your opponent, get a choke hold or arm bar on him to win. But in karate, you end up with somebody getting really hurt because there's no real way to go half speed."

"Personally I see karate as an art. It involves a 'kata' (or patterned dance) and to make it a sport it gets watered down from the original that was developed in Okinawa 300 years ago," Roseberry said.

Roseberry explains that neither judo nor karate is hard to learn. "People say they're uncoordinated and can't do the moves or techniques

"First of all I would like to see the word uncoordinated thrown out and second of all that's just an excuse to stay out of physical exercise," Roseberry said. "It's just that some people may have to work longer and harder than others, but anybody can learn. I teach all ages from 7 to 76-years-old and handicapped people also."

Even though John Roseberry is still learning it would appear there is a lot he has to share through teaching

Injuries, Flu Slow Four NU Starters

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Four starters missed practice Monday as the second-ranked and undefeated Nebraska Cornhuskers began preparations for Saturday's date with Iowa State, a game which Coach Tom Osborne calls "the most important game of my career."

Missing from the 90-minute workout in sweat clothes were defensive tackle Mike Fultz, monster man Wonder Monds, fullback Tony Davis and offensive tackle Bob Lingenfelter.

Fultz suffered a bruised thigh in last Saturday's 12-0 victory over Kansas State. Davis is nursing a sore knee and Monds has a sprained ankle, both injuries received against K-State. Lingenfelter has a virus infection which caused him to miss much of the game.

All four should be ready to face the Cyclones in a game which, if Nebraska wins, would insure a tie for the Big Eight Conference championship.

Speaking at the weekly Extra Point Club luncheon at the Elks Club, Osborne referred to the important game between Oklahoma and Missouri, also this Saturday.

"We can't control what will happen between Oklahoma and Missouri, but with the game being played in Columbia, Oklahoma could be in for a tough afternoon," he said. "A Missouri victory could give us a clear cut championship, provided we beat Iowa State."

"Iowa State is a better team than Kansas State offensively," Husker freshman coach Jim Ross said after scouting the Cyclones against Missouri. "Defensively, they're good size, as big as Missouri, and they have the best pass defense in the conference."

It was in the passing area that Nebraska failed to play as well as it had in earlier games. "It was our poorest performance, pass-wise, this year, except for the LSU game," receivers and passing game coach Jerry Moore said. "When we don't execute our passing we don't score a lot. We had a couple overthrown and a couple dropped. The passing game's success is a matter of concentration."

Osborne said the Huskers lacked field position and Kansas State played solid defense.

"When you score 40-50 points in a game, it usually comes about by getting the ball deep in the other team's territory several times," he said. "We got the ball near midfield twice, but the rest of the time we were faced with going 60-80 yards to score."

Osborne also promoted sophomore fullback Dodie Donnell to No. 2 at fullback, replacing Gary Higgs

Iowa State, in the throes of a four-game losing streak, also started prepping for the Huskers.

The Cyclone offense, far less productive of late than Coach Earle Bruce would like, worked on its running game against NU's defensive schemes.

"Nebraska is the best defensive team in the Big Eight," Bruce said. "They have big, strong personnel."

Bruce said Iowa State has "only hurt feelings" following their 44-14 loss to Missouri.

"I think we're okay injury-wise and shouldn't miss anybody against Nebraska," he said. "The only question Monday was quarterback Buddy Harderman, who Ross said is the "most exciting quarterback running with the ball" the Huskers will have faced this season.

Boys Town Win Shortens Trip

South Amherst, Ohio (AP)—The 784-mile trip back to Nebraska "is going to be shorter," said the Boys Town football team coach, "because of this first win."

Coach Jim Spencer was referring to the 14-12 victory over South Amherst here Thursday night. Speaking of the trip, Spencer said, "it's been real good for us. People really go out of their way for us."

The Boys Town Cowboys now are 1-7-1 for the season, but they had to work for it.

Cledis Henry scored on a one-yard quarterback sneak and with 5:37 remaining halfback Ronnell Morrison ran for the two-point conversion which clinched the game.

Boys Town took the early lead on a one-yard run by halfback Larry Carter.

South Amherst came back on the ensuing kickoff, however, and Dean Hughes romped for an 85-yard touchdown.

The home team made it 12-6 on an 11-yard pass by quarterback Jeff O'Brien who connected with Matt Hardwick.

He added that when the boys return to Omaha, "they have about a week of homework to make up."

Huskers Second In Polls

From News Wires

Ohio State, having thrust off the pesky challenge of Oklahoma for the time being, found itself with a new threat from Nebraska Monday in the battle for the national collegiate football championship.

Oklahoma, with its 28-game winning streak shattered by Kansas on Saturday, dropped from second place in the latest weekly ratings conducted by the United Press International and The Associated Press. Despite a still impressive 8-1 record, the Sooners failed to receive a single mention for the top three spots by any of the 42 coaches on the UPI board.

Ohio State, meantime, stretched its record to 9-0 with a 40-3 rout over Illinois and earned 39 first-place votes in the UPI poll and three seconds for a point total of 417, only three less than perfect. The Buckeyes, seeking their first national crown since 1968, have only two regular season games remaining, but their finale on Nov. 22 is at Michigan, also unbeaten.

Nebraska, also 9-0 after last Saturday's 12-0 shutout over Kansas State, climbed into the runnerup spot with the other three UPI first-place votes and 373 points. The Cornhuskers' hopes of supplanting Ohio State, of course, will rest on their meeting with Oklahoma at Norman, Nov. 22.

Moving up a notch to third place was Texas A&M, which improved its record to 8-0 by smothering SMU 36-3. The Aggies, who have zoomed back into national prominence under third-year coach Emory Bellard after years of adversity, still have a crucial Nov. 27 date with Texas (8-1) which will help decide their national championship fate as well as the Southwest Conference title.

In the AP poll, Ohio State received 49 first-place votes and 1,138 points from a nationwide panel of 58 sports writers and broadcasters following a 40-3 triumph over Illinois.

Nebraska moved up from third to second with eight first-place ballots and 1,054 points for a 12-0 victory over Kansas State while Texas A&M climbed from fourth to third after trouncing Southern Methodist 36-3. The Aggies received the remaining first-place ballot and 875 points.

Michigan and Alabama follow Texas A&M in both polls, but AP ranks Oklahoma sixth and Texas seventh while UPI reversed that order.

Playoff Times Finally Settled

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Lincoln Pius X and Waverly didn't want to bump heads with Friday afternoon's Nebraska-Iowa State freshman game, so they'll play their state Class B championship football game at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Seacrest Field.

Lincoln East also had a conflict.

Its all-school musical, Guys and Dolls, was scheduled for Friday night. But the Spartans will meet Omaha Westside anyway Friday at 7:30 p.m. at UNO for the state Class A championship.

Nebraska's other four state prep championship games are all set for 1:30 p.m. Friday.

It looked as if the Pius X-Waverly contest was also headed for a matinee performance until both schools agreed Monday morning on a night game.

"We're convinced we'll get a lot better crowd Friday night," Pius X coach and athletic director Vince Aldrich said.

To Lure Unbiased Fans

"With the freshman game Friday afternoon and Nebraska in town Saturday, we think we might pull some fans not tied to either school," Aldrich noted.

The decision to play Westside at night altered East's all-school musical plans because four varsity football players, three varsity cheerleaders and three pom pon girls are involved in the musical.

"Half of the orchestra members for the musical are also members of the marching band, which will perform at the football game," East principal Jim Huge pointed out.

Sunday Matinee Scheduled

Consequently, the musical will run as planned Thursday and Saturday nights with a Sunday 3 p.m. performance replacing Friday night's scheduled performance.

"Friday's tickets will be honored at the Sunday performance. Or, if that's inconvenient, they can be switched at the school for Thursday or Saturday shows," Huge said, adding "all of this is subject to Board of Education approval Tuesday."

Friday 1:30 p.m. state championships are confirmed with Wahoo Neumann (9-1) hosting Plainview (10-0) at Fremont's Memorial Stadium in Class C-1, Grant (9-1) hosting Scribner (9-1) in Class C-2, Nelson (9-0-1) hosting Lawrence (9-1) at Superior in Class D and Elgin (10-0) hosting Adams (10-0) in eight-man.

Chiefs Win See-Saw Match, 34-31

IRVING, Tex. (UPI) — Ed Podolak, who scored two touchdowns within 23 seconds of each other near the end of the first half, produced a third—and winning—score with 10 minutes remaining Monday night and the Kansas City Chiefs took advantage of five fumble recoveries to upset the Dallas Cowboys, 34-31.

Podolak's five-yard touchdown reception from Mike Livingston finally ended a scoring barrage that saw the lead change hands six times.

Safety Mike Sensibaugh and linebacker Willie Lanier then protected the Kansas City lead with interceptions that ran the Cowboys' turnover total to seven.

The victory improved Kansas City's record to 4-4 and kept alive the Chiefs' hopes of catching Oakland in the AFC West. Dallas, meanwhile, fell a game behind Washington and St. Louis in the NFC East with a 5-3 record.

Kansas City had produced a 51-yard field goal by Jan Stenerud and a touchdown by defensive end John Matuszak on a fumble recovery, but still trailed 17-10 with time running out in the first half.

But Podolak scored from the one with 1:20 remaining in the second quarter and, following a fumble by Doug Dennison on the ensuing kickoff, Podolak dashed in for the 11 to suddenly put the Chiefs in front at the half, 24-17.

After Dallas had tied the game in the third quarter, Stenerud put the Chiefs back in front with a 44-yard field goal and after Dallas moved in front again late in the third quarter, Kansas City came up with another fumble recovery and the Livingston to Podolak touchdown pass that decided the game.

Roger Staubach produced touchdown runs of nine and one yards for Dallas and threw touchdown passes of 15 and 47 yards to Golden Richards.

Lincoln East coach Lee Zentic and Omaha Westside coach Don Johnson spent last Saturday entirely differently.

But Sunday was the same kind of day for both coaches — film, film and more film.

The two, whose teams collide Friday night at UNO for the state Class A football championship, must be starting to feel like overworked projectionists.

The two schools traded films of their final five regular season games.

Westside's coaching staff worked from noon to 6 p.m. Sunday, breaking down East's film.

Zentic started breaking down Westside film at 1:30 p.m. Sunday. His coaching staff joined him at 7 and they worked another 2½ hours.

Bread and Butter

"Film evaluation is the bread and butter of a football program," says Zentic. "You use it to scout, to teach, to illustrate and to help your athletes get scholarships."

Johnson notes "you can't put a percentage on how important a film is, but it's invaluable as a teaching aid. A film can't lie. It's the best method you have to correct mistakes."

Film is not available to Lincoln teams every week, although Zentic has lobbied for what he considers a necessity, not a luxury.

"I've never had coach (Tom) Osborne write a letter, pointing out how important it is for a program to film each game," says Zentic.

"Grand Island uses 600 feet each game and even gets film broken down on offense and defense," he points out. "Westside uses about 500 feet. We can do ours on 400 feet for about $50 a game."

Both Zentic and Johnson have film available to their players no later than Monday.

Psychological Game

"I think you have to use some discretion how you use film," says Zentic. "There's some psychological considerations. For instance, it's not always best to show a team playing poorly when you know they're a much better ball club."

Johnson holds nothing back. "We're quite honest with what we show our kids," he says. "We like for them to see the other team's mistakes."

With modular scheduling, film is easily accessible to the athletes. During free study periods, players can run the projectors themselves.

"We review film almost until game time," says Johnson. "We start a one-hour taping period about 4 o'clock and reserve 5 to 6 o'clock for more film study."

East also uses film evaluation right up to the day of the game. "That shows just how important film is to your program," Zentic says.

Before launching into the long-term film study of each other's teams this week, Zentic and Johnson took different approaches Saturday.

Got Away From Football

"I got away from it all," says Zentic, who worked in his yard and listened to the Nebraska-Kansas State game on radio.

"I cleaned my garden and patio, did some touch up painting and put sand on the strawberries for the winter," he relates. "After church Sunday, I was really ready to dive in again."

Johnson used Saturday as a work day. He started breaking down film at noon, conducted a running and weightlifting practice at 3 p.m. and showed two films to his players.

Westside finished practice about 6 o'clock.

The results of both coaching approaches will be visible Friday night.

Final Prep Ratings After Title Games

In light of this week's state championship prep football matchups, the Sunday Journal and Star is not providing ratings this week.

Final ratings for the season will be published next week.

Playoff Times Finally Settled

Lincoln Pius X and Waverly didn't want to bump heads with Friday afternoon's Nebraska-Iowa State freshman game, so they'll play their state Class B championship football game at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Seacrest Field.

Lincoln East also had a conflict.

Its all-school musical, Guys and Dolls, was scheduled for Friday night. But the Spartans will meet Omaha Westside anyway Friday at 7:30 p.m. at UNO for the state Class A championship.

Nebraska's other four state prep championship games are all set for 1:30 p.m. Friday.

It looked as if the Pius X-Waverly contest was also headed for a matinee performance until both schools agreed Monday morning on a night game.

"We're convinced we'll get a lot better crowd Friday night," Pius X coach and athletic director Vince Aldrich said.

To Lure Unbiased Fans

"With the freshman game Friday afternoon and Nebraska in town Saturday, we think we might pull some fans not tied to either school," Aldrich noted.

The decision to play Westside at night altered East's all-school musical plans because four varsity football players, three varsity cheerleaders and three pom pon girls are involved in the musical.

"Half of the orchestra members for the musical are also members of the marching band, which will perform at the football game," East principal Jim Huge pointed out.

Sunday Matinee Scheduled

Consequently, the musical will run as planned Thursday and Saturday nights with a Sunday 3 p.m. performance replacing Friday night's scheduled performance.

"Friday's tickets will be honored at the Sunday performance. Or, if that's inconvenient, they can be switched at the school for Thursday or Saturday shows," Huge said, adding "all of this is subject to Board of Education approval Tuesday."

Friday 1:30 p.m. state championships are confirmed with Wahoo Neumann (9-1) hosting Plainview (10-0) at Fremont's Memorial Stadium in Class C-1, Grant (9-1) hosting Scribner (9-1) in Class C-2, Nelson (9-0-1) hosting Lawrence (9-1) at Superior in Class D and Elgin (10-0) hosting Adams (10-0) in eight-man.

Judo black belt holder, John Roseberry demonstrates a throw to a student.

Gentle Roseberry Talented

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

John Roseberry is a gentle man.

But inside of the pleasant, calm and charming exterior lies a man that could explode into a blur of speed grace and power that could stop almost anything as quick as you could say "judo."

Roseberry, who heads the Sho-Rei-Kan School of Judo in Lincoln, holds a sixth degree black belt in karate, and was just recently promoted to "Godan" (fifth degree black belt) in judo. He was the first American to be awarded a black belt in both sports, and is the only man in this area of the country with the "Godan".

"When I first started judo in 1955 in England, I did it so I could go out and learn to smoke somebody," Roseberry said. "But after about five years of wanting to go out and get someone, my teachers finally convinced me that there was a better way to go about things."

Roseberry, who was in the U.S. Marine Corps from 1955 to just three years ago, said the attitude helped him get along with himself and others better, and his judo improved.

Roseberry went on to win the following titles: All-Okinawa, Southeastern AAU, All-Service, and gained runner-up spots in the National AAU championships and the 1964 Olympic trials, besides being a player coach on the All-Marine Judo team for the Marine Corps.

"You find that all throughout the judo and karate ranks that the higher the degree of learning or ability the more gentle a person is," Roseberry said. "You might think the reverse, that the tougher a guy got the meaner he would get. But those type of people don't last long in either judo or karate. You don't practice the art to hurt but rather to help yourself and others."

"I let that attitude of using martial arts skills for defense only carry through to my teaching. I have two rules in my school," Roseberry said. "The first is that if you start a fight I don't want you in my school. And the other is that if you lose a fight I don't want you either."

The city of Lincoln gets a good deal with Roseberry. He not only works for the city Parks and Recreation Dept. but also offers self-defense classes on the side for them.

Roseberry is one of the few American judo teachers in the area with a teacher's certificate, which he earned while in Okinawa. "I've been in the sport for 20 years and have just been teaching about the last seven years," Roseberry said. "But there are some teachers that have been in the sports for fewer than six years that should still be students."

Roseberry doesn't feel he has anything over his students though just because he's been with the sport so long. "I would love to be on the other side, with one of them teaching," Roseberry said. "I had a teacher that once told me that after five years, a student is just beginning to learn. And after 10 years he is just beginning to learn. I've been with it 10 years and I'm just beginning to learn."

The reason for the humble attitude Roseberry explains, "You go to some tournaments and see some of these old fellows that can make you look like a baby."

"That's the way judo is," Roseberry said. "You have to get in shape from all the practice it takes to be good. And with judo you use the other person's momentum and strength to your advantage. You win by virtue of your balance and quickness."

"In karate (or empty hands) you use a lot of punches and kicks. It's a lot more offensive than judo, but judo is more practical as a sport," the former All-Marine champion for seven years said. "In judo sport all you have to do is throw your opponent, get a choke hold or arm bar on him to win. But in karate, you end up with somebody getting really hurt because there's no real way to go half speed."

"Personally I see karate as an art. It involves a 'kata' (or patterned dance) and to make it a sport it gets watered down from the original that was developed in Okinawa 300 years ago," Roseberry said.

Roseberry explains that neither judo nor karate is hard to learn. "People say they're uncoordinated and can't do the moves or techniques.

"First of all I would like to see the word uncoordinated thrown out and second of all that's just an excuse to stay out of physical exercise," Roseberry said. "It's just that some people may have to work longer and harder than others, but anybody can learn. I teach all ages from 7 to 76-years-old and handicapped people also."

Even though John Roseberry is still learning it would appear there is a lot he has to share through teaching.

Chiefs Win See-Saw Match, 34-31

IRVING, Tex. (UPI) — Ed Podolak, who scored two touchdowns within 23 seconds of each other near the end of the first half, produced a third—and winning—score with 10 minutes remaining Monday night and the Kansas City Chiefs took advantage of five fumble recoveries to upset the Dallas Cowboys, 34-31.

Podolak's five-yard touchdown reception from Mike Livingston finally ended a scoring barrage that saw the lead change hands six times.

Safety Mike Sensibaugh and linebacker Willie Lanier then protected the Kansas City lead with interceptions that ran the Cowboys' turnover total to seven.

The victory improved Kansas City's record to 4-4 and kept alive the Chiefs' hopes of catching Oakland in the AFC West. Dallas, meanwhile, fell a game behind Washington and St. Louis in the NFC East with a 5-3 record.

Kansas City had produced a 51-yard field goal by Jan Stenerud and a touchdown by defensive end John Matuszak on a fumble recovery, but still trailed 17-10 with time running out in the first half.

But Podolak scored from the one with 1:20 remaining in the second quarter and, following a fumble by Doug Dennison on the ensuing kickoff, Podolak dashed in for the 11 to suddenly put the Chiefs in front at the half, 24-17.

After Dallas had tied the game in the third quarter, Stenerud put the Chiefs back in front with a 44-yard field goal and after Dallas moved in front again late in the third quarter, Kansas City came up with another fumble recovery and the Livingston to Podolak touchdown pass that decided the game.

Roger Staubach produced touchdown runs of nine and one yards for Dallas and threw touchdown passes of 15 and 47 yards to Golden Richards.

Injuries, Flu Slow Four NU Starters

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Four starters missed practice Monday as the second-ranked and undefeated Nebraska Cornhuskers began preparations for Saturday's date with Iowa State, a game which Coach Tom Osborne calls "the most important game of my career."

Missing from the 90-minute workout in sweat clothes were defensive tackle Mike Fultz, monster man Wonder Monds, fullback Tony Davis and offensive tackle Bob Lingenfelter.

Fultz suffered a bruised thigh in last Saturday's 12-0 victory over Kansas State. Davis is nursing a sore knee and Monds has a sprained ankle, both injuries received against K-State. Lingenfelter has a virus infection which caused him to miss much of the game.

All four should be ready to face the Cyclones in a game which, if Nebraska wins, would insure a tie for the Big Eight Conference championship.

Speaking at the weekly Extra Point Club luncheon at the Elks Club, Osborne referred to the important game between Oklahoma and Missouri, also this Saturday.

"We can't control what will happen between Oklahoma and Missouri, but with the game being played in Columbia, Oklahoma could be in for a tough afternoon," he said. "A Missouri victory could give us a clear cut championship, provided we beat Iowa State."

"Iowa State is a better team than Kansas State offensively," Husker freshman coach Jim Ross said after scouting the Cyclones against Missouri. "Defensively, they're good size, as big as Missouri, and they have the best pass defense in the conference."

It was in the passing area that Nebraska failed to play as well as it had in earlier games. "It was our poorest performance, pass-wise, this year, except for the LSU game," receivers and passing game coach Jerry Moore said. "When we don't execute our passing we don't score a lot. We had a couple overthrown and a couple dropped. The passing game's success is a matter of concentration."

Osborne said the Huskers lacked field position and Kansas State played solid defense.

"When you score 40-50 points in a game, it usually comes about by getting the ball deep in the other team's territory several times," he said. "We got the ball near midfield twice, but the rest of the time we were faced with going 60-80 yards to score."

As a result of a good look at the films of the K-State game, sophomore Bob Hayes has been moved to the second string at the right tackle spot behind Steve Hones. Hayes replaced Rich Costanzo, who will concentrate his work at the left tackle spot. Previously, he had been backing up both the right and left tackles.

Osborne also promoted sophomore fullback Dodie Donnell to No. 2 at fullback, replacing Gary Higgs.

Iowa State, in the throes of a four-game losing streak, also started prepping for the Huskers.

The Cyclone offense, far less productive of late than Coach Earle Bruce would like, worked on its running game against NU's defensive schemes.

"Nebraska is the best defensive team in the Big Eight," Bruce said. "They have big, strong personnel."

Bruce said Iowa State has "only hurt feelings" following their 44-14 loss to Missouri.

"I think we're okay injury-wise and shouldn't miss anybody against Nebraska," he said. "The only question Monday was quarterback Buddy Hardeman, who Ross said is the "most exciting quarterback running with the ball" the Huskers will have faced this season.

Boys Town Win Shortens Trip

South Amherst, Ohio (AP)—The 784-mile trip back to Nebraska "is going to be shorter," said the Boys Town football team coach, "because of this first win."

Coach Jim Spencer was referring to the 14-12 victory over South Amherst here Thursday night. Speaking of the trip, Spencer said, "it's been real good for us. People really go out of their way for us."

The Boys Town Cowboys now are 1-7-1 for the season, but they had to work for it.

Cledis Henry scored on a one-yard quarterback sneak and with 5:37 remaining halfback Ronnell Morrison ran for the two-point conversion which clinched the game.

Boys Town took the early lead on a one-yard run by halfback Larry Carter.

South Amherst came back on the ensuing kickoff, however, and Dean Hughes romped for an 85-yard touchdown.

The home team made it 12-6 on an 11-yard pass by quarterback Jeff O'Brien who connected with Matt Hardwick.

He added that when the boys return to Omaha, "they have about a week of homework to make up."

Huskers Second In Polls

From News Wires

Ohio State, having thrust off the pesky challenge of Oklahoma for the time being, found itself with a new threat from Nebraska Monday in the battle for the national collegiate football championship.

Oklahoma, with its 28-game winning streak shattered by Kansas on Saturday, dropped from second place in the latest weekly ratings conducted by the United Press International and The Associated Press. Despite a still impressive 8-1 record, the Sooners failed to receive a single mention for the top three spots by any of the 42 coaches on the UPI board.

Ohio State, meantime, stretched its record to 9-0 with a 40-3 rout over Illinois and earned 39 first-place votes in the UPI poll and three seconds for a point total of 417, only three less than perfect. The Buckeyes, seeking their first national crown since 1968, have only two regular season games remaining, but their finale on Nov. 22 is at Michigan, also unbeaten.

Nebraska, also 9-0 after last Saturday's 12-0 shutout over Kansas State, climbed into the runnerup spot with the other three UPI first-place votes and 373 points. The Cornhuskers' hopes of supplanting Ohio State, of course, will rest on their meeting with Oklahoma at Norman, Nov. 22.

Moving up a notch to third place was Texas A&M, which improved its record to 8-0 by smothering SMU 36-3. The Aggies, who have zoomed back into national prominence under third-year coach Emory Bellard after years of adversity, still have a crucial Nov. 27 date with Texas (8-1) which will help decide their national championship fate as well as the Southwest Conference title.

In the AP poll, Ohio State received 49 first-place votes and 1,138 points from a nationwide panel of 58 sports writers and broadcasters following a 40-3 triumph over Illinois.

Nebraska moved up from third to second with eight first-place ballots and 1,054 points for a 12-0 victory over Kansas State while Texas A&M climbed from fourth to third after trouncing Southern Methodist 36-3. The Aggies received the remaining first-place ballot and 875 points.

Michigan and Alabama follow Texas A&M in both polls, but AP ranks Oklahoma sixth and Texas seventh while UPI reversed that order.

Bowl Berths Not Set After Many Upsets

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Those muffled sobs heard at football stadiums around the country last Saturday probably emanated from the respective bowl committees

"If you're not confused now, it's because you haven't been listening," a spokesman for one of the 11 major postseason bowls said Monday.

The weekend upsets of Oklahoma, Penn State, Southern California and Florida have made a thorough mess of the bowl picture, a state of affairs which the bowl committees frequently managed on their own in the past.

These are the only sure bets:

—The Big Ten champion (Ohio State or Michigan) will play the Pacific-8 king (probably UCLA, California or Stanford) in the Rose Bowl; the Big Eight champ (Nebraska or Oklahoma) will go to the Orange Bowl and the Southwest Conference winner (Texas, Texas A&M or Arkansas) will be the host team in the Cotton Bowl.

—Invitations can be handed out next Saturday but very few bids will be extended before Nov. 22. In fact, it was learned the Orange and Cotton Bowls have asked the Sugar Bowl to agree to wait until Nov. 22.

From talks with various officials, The Associated Press arrived at the following conclusions:

—The sudden rash of upsets put a damper on projected Sugar Bowl pairings of Alabama-Southern Cal or Alabama-Penn State, distinct possibilities until Saturday.

—Alabama, ranked No. 5 in the nation a week ago and certain to move up in view of Oklahoma's loss to Kansas, suddenly has a shot at the national championship. If Nebraska beats Oklahoma and Michigan topples Ohio State in two weeks, the Cornhuskers likely would be ranked No. 1 and 'Bama could wind up playing them in the Orange Bowl.

—Notre Dame, struggling despite a 7-2 record which could easily be 5-4 or 4-5, is very much back in the bowl picture. And Southern Cal, which probably played itself out of the Rose Bowl by losing to California two Saturdays ago, forfeited much of its charm with a second straight loss to Stanford.

"It's very confused," the bowl spokesman said. "The same teams are in the Orange, Cotton and Sugar Bowl pictures. And there are so many things to be decided."

Not the least of which is the fact that unbeaten Texas A&M, No. 4 a week ago, has key Southwest Conference games against Texas on Nov. 28 and Arkansas on Dec. 6. And while everyone is calling Texas-Texas A&M a showdown battle, if the Aggies beat Texas and then lose to Arkansas, the Razorbacks would wind up in the Cotton Bowl.

The bowl schedule looks like this:

Dec. 20, Tangerine Bowl; Dec. 22, Liberty Bowl; Dec. 26, Fiesta and Sun Bowls; Dec. 27, Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl; Dec. 29, Gator Bowl; Dec. 31, Peach and Sugar Bowls; Jan. 1, Cotton, Orange and Rose Bowls.

For pure guesswork, try these possibilities:

—If Ohio State beats Michigan and Nebraska beats Oklahoma, look for Nebraska-Alabama in the Orange Bowl, Oklahoma in the Sugar Bowl and Michigan or Notre Dame to the Cotton Bowl. Forget about Oklahoma in the Cotton in any case.

—If Michigan beats Ohio State and Oklahoma beats Nebraska, how about Oklahoma-Ohio State in the Orange, Alabama to the Sugar and Nebraska to the Cotton?

—Florida or Georgia to the Gator Bowl.

Other teams with impressive credentials for bowls that don't have conference tie-ups include Arizona, Arizona State, California, Colorado, Maryland, Missouri, Navy, North Carolina State, UCLA and West Virginia.

Such teams as 9-0 Arkansas State, 8-2 Ball State, 7-1 Louisiana Tech, 8-1 San Diego State and 8-1 San Jose State may not be invited anywhere for two reasons . . . no one wants to play them—the nothing-to-gain, everything-to-lose syndrome—and the TV networks won't buy them.

Films' Review Upsets Switzer

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — Barry Switzer knew his Oklahoma football team had to lose a game sooner or later, he just wanted them to lose while playing their best. It didn't happen that way against Kansas last weekend.

"I really believe this was a very disappointing loss, the way we lost," Switzer said Monday of the 23-3 loss which snapped Oklahoma's win streak at 28 games. "I was hoping when we lost we'd play well.

"After you view the film it makes you sick to know the best team doesn't always win," he said. "That's what hurts you more than anything, not performing to your capabilities."

"If we do the same thing against Missouri, we'll get beat," he said.

Switzer said Oklahoma would do everything possible to win the next two games, including starting a player against Missouri he had intended to redshirt.

"We'll probably have to start Jimmy Rogers at right halfback; we'll have to sacrifice his redshirt year," he said.

Rogers is a 5-10, 182-pound sophomore from Forrest City, Ark.

Starting halfback Elvis Peacock suffered a bruised sternum and will be unable to play Saturday.

Tight end Craig Lund is out for the rest of the year with an ankle injury, Switzer said, and split end Billy Brooks could be out for one or both games with a hamstring pull.

The Sooner coach said about 30 persons contacted him Monday about the loss and only one was critical.

"The letters, calls and telegrams today have been super," he said. "In two or three days I'll get the critical letters. It takes time for them to sit down and do it, to get rid of their pent up frustrations."

Switzer said he felt particularly bad for fullback Horace Ivory, who had 111 yards rushing in the first half, but gained only 28 yards and fumbled twice in the second half.

"It hurts him more than anyone else and I'm sad," Switzer said.

Both Ivory fumbles, he said, were caused by "second effort, squirming for more yards."

Oklahoma State

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP)—Oklahoma State coach Jim Stanley set new goals for his Oklahoma State Cowboys Monday in wake of last week's 17-7 loss to Colorado.

Stanley, admitting that the Pokes are now out of the bowl picture, pointed out that victories in O-State's two remaining games would produce a 7-4 record and the Pokes' fourth straight winning season.

That's something that has not been accomplished at Oklahoma State since 1944 under coach Jim Lookabough. A 7-4 mark would be the best by a Cowboy squad since 1958.

"We lost to a fine team at Colorado," Stanley said at his weekly press luncheon. "We'll have to set new goals to win the next two games. I think it's better to have goals, and not to reach them while striving hard, than not have goals at all.

"Every team we've lost to has been outstanding," he continued. "Pro scouts have said Colorado has 11 or so draft prospects."

Stanley said the saturated field at Boulder hampered both teams, but the Pokes slightly more. He also pointed to injuries to key Cowboy players, including quarterback Scott Burke and offensive guard Jim Ledford.

Burk was knocked unconscious late in the second half and was replaced by soph Sylvester Berry, fourth-string quarterback at the once-time deep position. Ledford, termed the most consistent on the offensive line by Stanley, broke a bone in his foot and will miss the last two games of his junior year.

OU Fan Takes Loss Very Hard

By ROBERT CAREY

Little Rock (UPI) — Well, Bob, I see you're up and around today following the Sooners' loss.

A. Yes, I was put to bed right after the game and the doctor gave me something to make me sleep and I feel better although I'm still a little shaky on my feet.

Q. I guess it came as quite a shock to you, the Kansas loss?

A. The fact I'm able to talk about it surprises me. But one has to keep going. I mean, there are some things in life that make it worthwhile besides OU football.

Q. Can you name some?

A. Uh, let me see. Hmmmm. Well, you can bet your national championship I could if I felt better. Eight turnovers — my God . . .

Q. What was that you said?

A. Uh, nothing. Maybe I got up too soon. Anyway, I think I'm taking this better than the Kentucky loss.

Q. The Kentucky loss?

A. Yeah, 13-7 in the 1951 Sugar Bowl. OU had won 31 straight, were national champions. That was a severe blow. I didn't talk to anyone for a week. It's a salute to the resiliency of youth that I made a complete recovery and was able to finish my junior year in high school.

Q. Then I guess the 7-0 loss to Notre Dame in 1957, ending Oklahoma's 47-game winning streak must have put you at death's door.

A. Well, I'm glad you asked that question. I was serving in the Air Force overseas. In Germany, in fact. And we were on an alert of some kind, one of those cold war flareups. I didn't even hear the score for a few days.

Q. Well, what happened when you did?

A. Funny thing. It didn't bother me at all that much. As I recall, I believe we were worried over there that Khrushchev was going to bomb us, or go to war or something, over access to Berling. And if he did my little outfit was certainly going to get wiped out. So, I had a little trouble getting it all into perspective. I just stretched out on my bunk for an hour and then went right back to the radar scope.

Q. Amazing.

A. Yes, well you understand I was younger then, fit and in the prime, one of Uncle Sam's finest.

Q. What are you going to do now?

A. Get ready for Missouri. I'll loosen up a little Monday, no contact work, get down to bread and butter in midweek. then maybe take in a movie Friday night. We'll be ready for Missouri. Life, as they say, goes on.

Robinson To Hold USC Reins

FOOTBALL

John Robinson, an obscure assistant coach with the Oakland Raiders, was selected to take over from John McKay as head football coach at the University of Southern California.

Robinson is no stranger to the Trojan campus. He was backfield coach and quarterback coach under McKay for three years — 1972-74. He was a regular staff assistant at the University of Oregon, his alma mater, for 12 years before moving to USC with McKay.

Ohio State coach Woody Hayes lashed out at the suggestion of a national collegiate football championship playoff. Kropp, Bullets Eye Playoffs

Hastings (AP) — Tom Kropp, Nebraska's current contribution to professional basketball, said Monday his Washington Bullets team of the National Basketball League is optimistic and hoping to make this year's playoffs.

Kropp, who has played in three of the Bullets' six games this year, said the team has not played to its potential throughout the exhibition season and throughout the first of the regular season.

Kropp, a native of Aurora, who played his college ball at Kearney State College, said he has not had to learn much about basketball since joining the pros, but has had to adjust to the style of play in the NBA.

Kropp noted that pro basketball differs from the college level because players are "taller and a little bit quicker."

He said the best players he has seen in both pro leagues include Julius Erving, George McGinnis and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

The 6-4 player said that come next spring, he hoped to be one of the 12 players wearing this season's NBA championship ring.

Bowl Berths Not Set After Many Upsets

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Those muffled sobs heard at football stadiums around the country last Saturday probably emanated from the respective bowl committees.

"If you're not confused now, it's because you haven't been listening," a spokesman for one of the 11 major postseason bowls said Monday.

The weekend upsets of Oklahoma, Penn State, Southern California and Florida have made a thorough mess of the bowl picture, a state of affairs which the bowl committees frequently managed on their own in the past.

These are the only sure bets:

—The Big Ten champion (Ohio State or Michigan) will play the Pacific-8 king (probably UCLA, California or Stanford) in the Rose Bowl; the Big Eight champ (Nebraska or Oklahoma) will go to the Orange Bowl and the Southwest Conference winner (Texas, Texas A&M or Arkansas) will be the host team in the Cotton Bowl.

—Invitations can be handed out next Saturday but very few bids will be extended before Nov. 22. In fact, it was learned the Orange and Cotton Bowls have asked the Sugar Bowl to agree to wait until Nov. 22.

From talks with various officials, The Associated Press arrived at the following conclusions:

—The sudden rash of upsets put a damper on projected Sugar Bowl pairings of Alabama-Southern Cal or Alabama-Penn State, distinct possibilities until Saturday.

—Alabama, ranked No. 5 in the nation a week ago and certain to move up in view of Oklahoma's loss to Kansas, suddenly has a shot at the national championship. If Nebraska beats Oklahoma and Michigan topples Ohio State in two weeks, the Cornhuskers likely would be ranked No. 1 and 'Bama could wind up playing them in the Orange Bowl.

—Notre Dame, struggling despite a 7-2 record which could easily be 5-4 or 4-5, is very much back in the bowl picture. And Southern Cal, which probably played itself out of the Rose Bowl by losing to California two Saturdays ago, forfeited much of its charm with a second straight loss to Stanford.

"It's very confused," the bowl spokesman said. "The same teams are in the Orange, Cotton and Sugar Bowl pictures. And there are so many things to be decided."

Not the least of which is the fact that unbeaten Texas A&M, No. 4 a week ago, has key Southwest Conference games against Texas on Nov. 28 and Arkansas on Dec. 6. And while everyone is calling Texas-Texas A&M a showdown battle, if the Aggies beat Texas and then lose to Arkansas, the Razorbacks would wind up in the Cotton Bowl.

The bowl schedule looks like this:

Dec. 20, Tangerine Bowl; Dec. 22, Liberty Bowl; Dec. 26, Fiesta and Sun Bowls; Dec. 27, Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl; Dec. 29, Gator Bowl; Dec. 31, Peach and Sugar Bowls; Jan. 1, Cotton, Orange and Rose Bowls.

For pure guesswork, try these possibilities:

—If Ohio State beats Michigan and Nebraska beats Oklahoma, look for Nebraska-Alabama in the Orange Bowl, Oklahoma in the Sugar Bowl and Michigan or Notre Dame to the Cotton Bowl. Forget about Oklahoma in the Cotton in any case.

—If Michigan beats Ohio State and Oklahoma beats Nebraska, how about Oklahoma-Ohio State in the Orange, Alabama to the Sugar and Nebraska to the Cotton?

—Florida or Georgia to the Gator Bowl.

Other teams with impressive credentials for bowls that don't have conference tie-ups include Arizona, Arizona State, California, Colorado, Maryland, Missouri, Navy, North Carolina State, UCLA and West Virginia.

Such teams as 9-0 Arkansas State, 8-2 Ball State, 7-1 Louisiana Tech, 8-1 San Diego State and 8-1 San Jose State may not be invited anywhere for two reasons . . . no one wants to play them—the nothing-to-gain, everything-to-lose syndrome—and the TV networks won't buy them.

Films' Review Upsets Switzer

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — Barry Switzer knew his Oklahoma football team had to lose a game sooner or later, he just wanted them to lose while playing their best. It didn't happen that way against Kansas last weekend.

"I really believe this was a very disappointing loss, the way we lost," Switzer said Monday of the 23-3 loss which snapped Oklahoma's win streak at 28 games. "I was hoping when we lost we'd play well.

"After you view the film it makes you sick to know the best team doesn't always win," he said. "That's what hurts you more than anything, not performing to your capabilities."

"If we do the same thing against Missouri, we'll get beat," he said.

Switzer said Oklahoma would do everything possible to win the next two games, including starting a player against Missouri he had intended to redshirt.

"We'll probably have to start Jimmy Rogers at right halfback; we'll have to sacrifice his redshirt year," he said.

Rogers is a 5-10, 182-pound sophomore from Forrest City, Ark.

Starting halfback Elvis Peacock suffered a bruised sternum and will be unable to play Saturday.

Tight end Craig Lund is out for the rest of the year with an ankle injury, Switzer said, and split end Billy Brooks could be out for one or both games with a hamstring pull.

The Sooner coach said about 30 persons contacted him Monday about the loss and only one was critical.

"The letters, calls and telegrams today have been super," he said. "In two or three days I'll get the critical letters. It takes time for them to sit down and do it, to get rid of their pent up frustrations."

Switzer said he felt particularly bad for fullback Horace Ivory, who had 111 yards rushing in the first half, but gained only 28 yards and fumbled twice in the second half.

"It hurts him more than anyone else and I'm sad," Switzer said.

Both Ivory fumbles, he said, were caused by "second effort, squirming for more yards."

Oklahoma State

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP)—Oklahoma State coach Jim Stanley set new goals for his Oklahoma State Cowboys Monday in wake of last week's 17-7 loss to Colorado.

Stanley, admitting that the Pokes are now out of the bowl picture, pointed out that victories in O-State's two remaining games would produce a 7-4 record and the Pokes' fourth straight winning season.

That's something that has not been accomplished at Oklahoma State since 1944 under coach Jim Lookabough. A 7-4 mark would be the best by a Cowboy squad since 1958.

"We lost to a fine team at Colorado," Stanley said at his weekly press luncheon. "We'll have to set new goals to win the next two games. I think it's better to have goals, and not to reach them while striving hard, than not have goals at all.

"Every team we've lost to has been outstanding," he continued. "Pro scouts have said Colorado has 11 or so draft prospects."

Stanley said the saturated field at Boulder hampered both teams, but the Pokes slightly more. He also pointed to injuries to key Cowboy players, including quarterback Scott Burke and offensive guard Jim Ledford.

Burk was knocked unconscious late in the second half and was replaced by soph Sylvester Berry, fourth-string quarterback at the once-time deep position. Ledford, termed the most consistent on the offensive line by Stanley, broke a bone in his foot and will miss the last two games of his junior year.

OU Fan Takes Loss Very Hard

(Editors note: Robert Carey is a life-long and fairly insufferable Oklahoma football fan. Here is his tongue-in-cheek interview with himself over the loss to Kansas Saturday that snapped Oklahoma's 28-game winning streak.)

By ROBERT CAREY

Little Rock (UPI) — Well, Bob, I see you're up and around today following the Sooners' loss.

A. Yes, I was put to bed right after the game and the doctor gave me something to make me sleep and I feel better although I'm still a little shaky on my feet.

Q. I guess it came as quite a shock to you, the Kansas loss?

A. The fact I'm able to talk about it surprises me. But one has to keep going. I mean, there are some things in life that make it worthwhile besides OU football.

Q. Can you name some?

A. Uh, let me see. Hmmmm. Well, you can bet your national championship I could if I felt better. Eight turnovers — my God . . .

Q. What was that you said?

A. Uh, nothing. Maybe I got up too soon. Anyway, I think I'm taking this better than the Kentucky loss.

Q. The Kentucky loss?

A. Yeah, 13-7 in the 1951 Sugar Bowl. OU had won 31 straight, were national champions. That was a severe blow. I didn't talk to anyone for a week. It's a salute to the resiliency of youth that I made a complete recovery and was able to finish my junior year in high school.

Q. Then I guess the 7-0 loss to Notre Dame in 1957, ending Oklahoma's 47-game winning streak must have put you at death's door.

A. Well, I'm glad you asked that question. I was serving in the Air Force overseas. In Germany, in fact. And we were on an alert of some kind, one of those cold war flareups. I didn't even hear the score for a few days.

Q. Well, what happened when you did?

A. Funny thing. It didn't bother me at all that much. As I recall, I believe we were worried over there that Khrushchev was going to bomb us, or go to war or something, over access to Berling. And if he did my little outfit was certainly going to get wiped out. So, I had a little trouble getting it all into perspective. I just stretched out on my bunk for an hour and then went right back to the radar scope.

Q. Amazing.

A. Yes, well you understand I was younger then, fit and in the prime, one of Uncle Sam's finest.

Q. What are you going to do now?

A. Get ready for Missouri. I'll loosen up a little Monday, no contact work, get down to bread and butter in midweek. then maybe take in a movie Friday night. We'll be ready for Missouri. Life, as they say, goes on.

Kropp, Bullets Eye Playoffs

Hastings (AP) — Tom Kropp, Nebraska's current contribution to professional basketball, said Monday his Washington Bullets team of the National Basketball League is optimistic and hoping to make this year's playoffs.

Kropp, who has played in three of the Bullets' six games this year, said the team has not played to its potential throughout the exhibition season and throughout the first of the regular season.

Kropp, a native of Aurora, who played his college ball at Kearney State College, said he has not had to learn much about basketball since joining the pros, but has had to adjust to the style of play in the NBA.

Kropp noted that pro basketball differs from the college level because players are "taller and a little bit quicker."

He said the best players he has seen in both pro leagues include Julius Erving, George McGinnis and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

The 6-4 player said that come next spring, he hoped to be one of the 12 players wearing this season's NBA championship ring.

Switzer Familiar With Losses

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Although Saturday marked his first loss as a head coach, Oklahoma's Barry Switzer admitted Monday he has been familiar with defeats before.

"Oh, yeah, I've been involved in some real butt-kickings," he said, referring to his days as a player and an assistant coach.

The Sooners were upset, 23-3 by Kansas, ending a 28-game winning streak and a 37-game skein without a loss.

Switzer said via telephone at the weekly Big Eight briefings that as the season progressed he became more and more aware that his team had a chance to lose to any good team.

"We never talked about the possibility of losing," he said. "And I felt like we could win every game we played. But you defy the odds by going undefeated even with a great football team.

"When we talked among the staff, we knew that if we got through this thing unbeaten then we'd know there was a silver wand over our heads."

All four—three touchdowns and a field goal—of Kansas' scores came after Oklahoma turnovers in Sooner territory.

"If we'd done the same thing against Texas or Colorado or Oklahoma State, they would have beaten us, too," said Switzer.

Oklahoma lost four fumbles and four pass interceptions in the contest and suffered a blocked punt and blocked field goal.

Concerning the turnovers, Switzer said, "I just couldn't believe it. I was just kneeling on the sidelines praying. It puts you in a state of uncertainty. We just weren't allowing ourselves a chance to win."

Switzer said the fact Kansas was the team that broke the streak didn't necessarily surprise him.

"I knew it could happen against any good team," he said. "Against any team that played well and, of course, this is the poorest we've played all year."

Switzer, who compiled a 29-01 record before his first loss, said he believed his team would bounce back Saturday against Missouri.

"We've had more than our share of good in this game. One loss doesn't erase all that we've accomplished. We're 8-1 and still one of the great teams in the country.

Bud Moore, coach the Kansas team that brought the Sooners down to earth, said he's busy now trying to get the Jayhawks to think about Saturday's game with Colorado.

"It will be the same type of football game we played last week," Moore said of the battle with the Buffs.

Missouri Coach Al Onofrio said it's "going to be a tougher job now" for the Tigers in their game with Oklahoma, referring to the fact the Sooners had lost. "Oklahoma will probably be more emotional now. They still have a chance for the Big Eight championship."

Coach Bill Mallory of Colorado described Kansas as "tough ... tough ... they certainly went after Oklahoma. Coming off a win like that is bound to give them more confidence."

"We graded very well," Stanley sad. "It was a supreme effort. It was our best pass rush of the year. Richad Allen (noseguard) played his best game of the year.

Kansas State will venture to Stillwater Saturday for the Cowboys' homecoming. "Their freshman quarterback (James Mack of Tulsa) looks like the best of the bunch," Stanley said about the Wildcats' injury-plagued quarterback position. "They're just a big as we are on defense with plenty of good people. They don't have big name stars, but they're consistently tough."

Burk is expected to start for the Pokes Saturday. Defensive end-strong safety Joe Avanzini and safety Kent Shirley are expected to return to action after sitting out the Colorado game. Offensive guard Robert Ringwall also has a chance to play, but junior Mike Ritz will still be forced into backup duty at center and guard, Stanley said.

"They've got great speed," K-State Coach Ellis Rainsberger said of Oklahoma State, the Wildcats' next foe, "And that's one of the things we have trouble with. Oklahoma State may be the most physical team in the Big Eight."

Jim Stanley, the O-State coach, denied his job is in jeopardy following last week's 17-7 loss to Colorado. Before the game, reports were circulating that Stanley would be fired if the Cowboys lost at Colorado.

"We had some confusion last week we did not need," Stanley said. "Someone on the board of regents made an asinine statement ... it took away from our concentration. I feel it's over. I'm not worried about any job."

Stanley said most of the regents made the trip to Colorado and that "they expressed a vote of confidence ... whatever that means."

Switzer Wants No Bury Barry

Norman, Okla. (AP) — For a guy who's lost only one football game in three seasons, Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer isn't taking any chances.

Sooner football fans are considered as rabid as any in the nation.

After Oklahoma registered 6-4 and 7-4 regular season records in 1969 and 1970 under Chuck Fairbanks, bumper stickers and placards declaring "Chuck Chuck" cropped up over the state.

The "Chuck Chuck" movement only was stilled when the Sooners registered 11-1 records, including a pair of bowl victories, in 1971 and 1972.

Fairbanks moved on to be coach of the professional New England Patriots and Switzer was elevated to Sooner head man.

Switzer, who now has a 29-1-1 coaching record, obviously learned from Fairbanks' experience.

"I want every one to know that I've got a copyright on 'Bury Barry', and if those signs show up I'm going to sue," he warned Saturday night after the defending national champions had suffered a 23-3 upset loss to Kansas.

It was Oklahoma's first defeat in 37 games.

Player Critical

Philadelphia (AP) — Ron Barlow, a Rhode Island University football player paralyzed in Saturday's game with Temple, was in "very, very guarded condition" Monday, a Temple Hospital spokesman said.

KU Duo Share Big Eight Honor

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — Halfback Laverne Smith and quarterback Nolan Cromwell didn't compile sensational statistics Saturday.

But the Kansas backs made the yardage when it had to be made and were instrumental in the Jayhawks' 23-3 upset victory over Oklahoma.

For their efforts, the two were named Monday as co-Big Eight offensive players of the week.

Smith gained 88 yards on 18 carries and scored on runs of 21 and 18 yards and Cromwell picked up 69 yards on 23 carries and tallied on a six-yard thrust.

Mainly, the two enabled Kansas to control the ball in key situations.

"Smith was able to make the big play when we had to gamble," said Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer. "Once he got outside, he just used his great speed to outrun everyone on the field.

"Cromwell made some big plays, too, even though his statistics weren't that impressive.

He's big and strong and hard to bring down. I was impressed with him."

Smith, who gained 1,181 yards as a tailback last season, has made the successful transition to coach Bud Moore's wishbone attack.

Cromwell, of course, was shifted from the defensive backfield to quarterback this season and is leading the Big Eight in rushing with 941 yards.

The Smith-Cromwell combination was a unanimous choice for the weekly award by the conference's three-man panel of newsmen.

Other nominees were Iowa State wide receiver Forry Smith, Oklahoma State fullback Robert Turner, Colorado quarterback David Williams, Missouri wide receiver Henry Marshall, Nebraska fullback Tony Davis and Oklahoma fullback Horace Ivory.

"Their freshman quarterback (James Mack of Tulsa) looks like the best of the bunch," Stanley said about the Wildcats' injury-plagued quarterback position. "They're just a big as we are on defense with plenty of good people. They don't have big name stars, but they're consistently tough."

Burk is expected to start for the Pokes Saturday. Defensive end-strong safety Joe Avanzini and safety Kent Shirley are expected to return to action after sitting out the Colorado game. Offensive guard Robert Ringwall also has a chance to play, but junior Mike Ritz will still be forced into backup duty at center and guard, Stanley said.

"They've got great speed," K-State Coach Ellis Rainsberger said of Oklahoma State, the Wildcats' next foe, "And that's one of the things we have trouble with. Oklahoma State may be the most physical team in the Big Eight."

Jim Stanley, the O-State coach, denied his job is in jeopardy following last week's 17-7 loss to Colorado. Before the game, reports were circulating that Stanley would be fired if the Cowboys lost at Colorado.

"We had some confusion last week we did not need," Stanley said. "Someone on the board of regents made an asinine statement . . . it took away from our concentration. I feel it's over. I'm not worried about any job."

Stanley said most of the regents made the trip to Colorado and that "they expressed a vote of confidence . . . whatever that means."

Switzer Wants No Bury Barry

Norman, Okla. (AP) — For a guy who's lost only one football game in three seasons, Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer isn't taking any chances.

Sooner football fans are considered as rabid as any in the nation.

After Oklahoma registered 6-4 and 7-4 regular season records in 1969 and 1970 under Chuck Fairbanks, bumper stickers and placards declaring "Chuck Chuck" cropped up over the state.

The "Chuck Chuck" movement only was stilled when the Sooners registered 11-1 records, including a pair of bowl victories, in 1971 and 1972.

Fairbanks moved on to be coach of the professional New England Patriots and Switzer was elevated to Sooner head man.

Switzer, who now has a 29-1-1 coaching record, obviously learned from Fairbanks' experience.

"I want every one to know that I've got a copyright on 'Bury Barry', and if those signs show up I'm going to sue," he warned Saturday night after the defending national champions had suffered a 23-3 upset loss to Kansas.

It was Oklahoma's first defeat in 37 games.

Player Critical

Philadelphia (AP) — Ron Barlow, a Rhode Island University football player paralyzed in Saturday's game with Temple, was in "very, very guarded condition" Monday, a Temple Hospital spokesman said.

KU Duo Share Big Eight Honor

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — Halfback Laverne Smith and quarterback Nolan Cromwell didn't compile sensational statistics Saturday.

But the Kansas backs made the yardage when it had to be made and were instrumental in the Jayhawks' 23-3 upset victory over Oklahoma.

For their efforts, the two were named Monday as co-Big Eight offensive players of the week.

Smith gained 88 yards on 18 carries and scored on runs of 21 and 18 yards and Cromwell picked up 69 yards on 23 carries and tallied on a six-yard thrust.

Mainly, the two enabled Kansas to control the ball in key situations.

"Smith was able to make the big play when we had to gamble," said Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer. "Once he got outside, he just used his great speed to outrun everyone on the field.

"Cromwell made some big plays, too, even though his statistics weren't that impressive.

He's big and strong and hard to bring down. I was impressed with him."

Smith, who gained 1,181 yards as a tailback last season, has made the successful transition to coach Bud Moore's wishbone attack.

Cromwell, of course, was shifted from the defensive backfield to quarterback this season and is leading the Big Eight in rushing with 941 yards.

The Smith-Cromwell combination was a unanimous choice for the weekly award by the conference's three-man panel of newsmen.

Other nominees were Iowa State wide receiver Forry Smith, Oklahoma State fullback Robert Turner, Colorado quarterback David Williams, Missouri wide receiver Henry Marshall, Nebraska fullback Tony Davis and Oklahoma fullback Horace Ivory.

Questions Postpone Study Of Garbage Burning

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Local leaders apparently want some more answers before they take a closer look at burning garbage and spending $40,000 in consultant fees to complete the solid waste study.

Members of the City Council and County Board and the mayor again took no action Monday on what type of trash burning plant they want a consulting firm to study further

Essentially, the officials have narrowed down the field of possible garbage burning plants to two — a fuel processing and resource recovery plant and a steam generating plant.

The group has eliminated further study of a gas generation plant and ammonia production plant at this time.

Last week the group, meeting as the City-County Common, delayed action on making a recommendation contending they needed more information

On Monday, officials said they still have some questions surrounding the construction and operation of any garbage burning plant. The group drew up a list of questions which they want the consultant, the Ralph Parsons firm, and city department heads to answer.

Public Works Director Bob Obering pointed out that some of the problems posed by the perplexed officials probably won't be answered by the Parsons firm. Those requirements weren't written into the contract.

For example, the Common wants to know if the Nebraska Public Power District would agree to burn Lincoln's trash at its Sheldon Station, near Hallam. It's not the consultant's job to find that out, Obering said.

The Common also wants to know if the University of Nebraska can legally sell steam to private customers.

The Common wants a guarantee there will be some customers if a steam generating plant is constructed.

The Common also wants to know if the city can produce chilled water and steam at a cheaper rate than potential customers could obtain elsewhere.

The Common asked the Parsons firm to give them two weeks, if needed, to receive answers to those questions before proceeding with the solid waste study.

Under the terms of the contract, the elected officials were supposed to decide which method of burning garbage they wanted the firm to review further. The final stage of that contract carries a $40,000 price tag. The total study will cost $120,000.

The consultants have recommended the city and county build an $11.5 million plant, with the refuse transported to NPPD's Sheldon Station for burning.

The officials probably would recommend that any such facility be financed with general obligation bonds, which would require voter approval.

Sometimes Best Ideas Difficult To Implement

City Councilman Bob Sikyta said it all sounded too good to be true.

It seems the city law department had come up with a foolproof way to cut down on governmental paper shuffling when it came to the city's legislative program.

City Atty. Charles Humble told the lawmakers Monday he was placing all reports, legislative bills and the city administration's recommendations in one convenient place — a black, loose-leaf notebook. One for each council member.

Sikyta, a frequent critic of the volume of materials which descends on lawmakers' heads, was delighted.

But, being the cynic that he is, he was sure the notebook project was "so simple, there must be something wrong with it."

Mayor Helen Boosalis, pleased that something her administration did met with Sikyta's approval, joked back, "If there's something wrong, I'm sure you'll find it, Bob."

Well, he didn't have to look far. In fact, Sikyta didn't find anything at all — those magic notebooks were missing.

Somehow, somewhere, the big, thick binders got lost in City Hall.

Sikyta said he knew the idea was just too good to be true.

Changes Planned In Police Exams

City officials are going to shell out around $6,000 during the next year to revise the Lincoln Police Department's entrance exams

The City Council indicated Monday it will endorse Mayor Helen Boosalis's proposal to join with Omaha and a number of other cities in hiring a California firm to draw up new selection tests

Police Chief George Hansen and Personnel Director Walt Mitchell said revisions in the department's selection process is needed. A new examination will help the city withstand court tests should unsuccessful applicants contend they were discriminated against in the hiring process.

Describing the proposed changes, Mitchell said, "This process will upgrade our selection system and lower the chance of a (successful) court challenge by women, men, minorities or whatever."

Chief Hansen said the city would be quite vulnerable to lawsuits if nothing were done.

Lincoln Joins Others

Lincoln will join with Omaha, Colorado Springs, Milwaukee, Birmingham, Ala., and other cities in hiring Wollack, Waibel and Associates of Fair Oaks, Calif., to draw up criteria for police entrance exams.

Eventually, Mitchell said, similar revisions will have to be made in entrance tests for firefighters.

Mitchell said it would cost Lincoln between $35,000 and $40,000 to do the study alone.

Applicants for Lincoln police officer now take a series of written, oral, physical and psychological tests.

The California firm will help Lincoln officials revise those tests, specifically in the areas of reading comprehension, writing skills, situational-reasoning, selection standards, oral testing, physical performance and background investigation.

By rewriting the tests, city officials hope to make entrance exams more job related. Recent court cases have held that tests for hiring or promotion must measure the person for the job.

City officials said the next testing program, which should take about a year to write, won't necessarily mean more minority people will qualify for the Police Department

Skill Reflected

The test will, officials argue, more accurately reflect what skills a person will need to be a police officer.

From 1970 to 1974, Mitchell reported that 1,952 people took entrance exams for the Police Department. Of that number, 158 were hired.

Any of the 1,794 people who were rejected could have challenged the city's selection process, Mitchell said The new tests, which will be "validated" because of the study, will enable the city to withstand any court challenges, he said

The Police Department, under Chief Hansen's guidance, has dropped the unofficial restriction banning women from patrol duties. The department will begin assigning women to patrol by January. The city would be opening itself up to a lawsuit otherwise, he has said.

Council To Study Appointees

City Council members said Monday they're going to take this week to review Mayor Helen Boosalis's appointments to the Police Review Board.

Mayor Boosalis submitted seven names to the council, which must either confirm or reject those appointments next Monday.

The mayor's candidates are:

Nancy O'Brien, of 2111 A, a history teacher at Lincoln Northeast; James Kamas of 1208 Mulder, owner of Baker Printing; Stanley Sands, of 2601 Woodscrest, president of Standard Meat Co.; Ted LaRose, of 645 S. 24th, car salesman for Dean Brothers Auto;

B. N. Garcia, of 3027 S. 48th, an estimator for Beall Construction Co.; Ed Wimes, of 4600 Grassridge Rd., student at the University of Nebraska and a Vietnam veteran, and Jack Siegman, of 4045 S. 39th, associate professor sociology at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The mayor chose seven people from a field of 60 who had submitted written resumes to her.

She told the lawmakers the decision was "very difficult."

Lawmakers Unable To Decide Between Paved, Rock Surface

City lawmakers couldn't decide Monday whether a parking lot to be built near the County-City Building should be graveled or paved.

So the lawmakers delayed action another week.

At issue is whether M. E. Whitehead has to pave a parking lot located on the south side of J between 10th and 11th. Whitehead doesn't want to pave the lot, because he says it will cost more money than he wants to spend. Less cars could be parked on the lot if it were paved, he pointed out.

The planning commission is recommending that the lot be paved The planners have pointed out that a paved lot would look better than a graveled one, particularly since J St. is being improved between City Hall and the State Capitol Building.

The City Council recently rejected a similar planning commission recommendation urging that a city-owned parking lot be paved instead of graveled. A majority of the council opted for the cheaper graveling.

In other business Monday the council:

$7,758,000 In Damages Awarded In Libel Case

San Francisco (UPI)—A Superior Court jury Monday awarded a record $7,758,000 in damages to prize-winning filmmaker Don Widener in his libel suit against the Pacific Gas & Electric Co.

David E. Pesonen, attorney for Widener, said this was the biggest libel judgment ever awarded to an individual in the United States.

The 12-member jury, after a five-week trial and two days of deliberation, awarded Widner $750,000 in general damages and $7 million in punitive damages.

An $8,000 judgment was made against James C. Carroll, a PG&E engineer, who wrote the original draft of a letter which accused Widener of doctoring a film on the dangers of nuclear power stations.

The one-hour documentary "The Powers That Be" was narrated by actor Jack Lemon and aired on KNBC-TV in Los Angeles in May 1971.

Pesonen said Carroll's letter falsely claimed that Widener inserted in the documentary statements made during a secretly-taped, informal, off-camera interview.

Pesonen told the court that Carroll's letter was revised by the PG&E public relations department. He said the letter all but blacklisted Widener.

The letter was sent to the Federal Communications Commission, the Senate Commerce Committee and the Congressional Joint Committee on Atomic Energy as well as to individual lawmakers in Washington.

Questions Postpone Study Of Garbage Burning

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Local leaders apparently want some more answers before they take a closer look at burning garbage and spending $40,000 in consultant fees to complete the solid waste study.

Members of the City Council and County Board and the mayor again took no action Monday on what type of trash burning plant they want a consulting firm to study further.

Essentially, the officials have narrowed down the field of possible garbage burning plants to two — a fuel processing and resource recovery plant and a steam generating plant.

The group has eliminated further study of a gas generation plant and ammonia production plant at this time.

Last week the group, meeting as the City-County Common, delayed action on making a recommendation contending they needed more information.

On Monday, officials said they still have some questions surrounding the construction and operation of any garbage burning plant. The group drew up a list of questions which they want the consultant, the Ralph Parsons firm, and city department heads to answer.

Public Works Director Bob Obering pointed out that some of the problems posed by the perplexed officials probably won't be answered by the Parsons firm. Those requirements weren't written into the contract.

For example, the Common wants to know if the Nebraska Public Power District would agree to burn Lincoln's trash at its Sheldon Station, near Hallam. It's not the consultant's job to find that out, Obering said.

The Common also wants to know if the University of Nebraska can legally sell steam to private customers.

The Common wants a guarantee there will be some customers if a steam generating plant is constructed.

The Common also wants to know if the city can produce chilled water and steam at a cheaper rate than potential customers could obtain elsewhere.

The Common asked the Parsons firm to give them two weeks, if needed, to receive answers to those questions before proceeding with the solid waste study.

Under the terms of the contract, the elected officials were supposed to decide which method of burning garbage they wanted the firm to review further. The final stage of that contract carries a $40,000 price tag. The total study will cost $120,000.

The consultants have recommended the city and county build an $11.5 million plant, with the refuse transported to NPPD's Sheldon Station for burning.

The officials probably would recommend that any such facility be financed with general obligation bonds, which would require voter approval.

Sometimes Best Ideas Difficult To Implement

City Councilman Bob Sikyta said it all sounded too good to be true.

It seems the city law department had come up with a foolproof way to cut down on governmental paper shuffling when it came to the city's legislative program.

City Atty. Charles Humble told the lawmakers Monday he was placing all reports, legislative bills and the city administration's recommendations in one convenient place — a black, loose-leaf notebook. One for each council member.

Sikyta, a frequent critic of the volume of materials which descends on lawmakers' heads, was delighted.

But, being the cynic that he is, he was sure the notebook project was "so simple, there must be something wrong with it."

Mayor Helen Boosalis, pleased that something her administration did met with Sikyta's approval, joked back, "If there's something wrong, I'm sure you'll find it, Bob."

Well, he didn't have to look far. In fact, Sikyta didn't find anything at all — those magic notebooks were missing.

Somehow, somewhere, the big, thick binders got lost in City Hall.

Sikyta said he knew the idea was just too good to be true.

Changes Planned In Police Exams

City officials are going to shell out around $6,000 during the next year to revise the Lincoln Police Department's entrance exams.

The City Council indicated Monday it will endorse Mayor Helen Boosalis's proposal to join with Omaha and a number of other cities in hiring a California firm to draw up new selection tests.

Police Chief George Hansen and Personnel Director Walt Mitchell said revisions in the department's selection process is needed. A new examination will help the city withstand court tests should unsuccessful applicants contend they were discriminated against in the hiring process.

Describing the proposed changes, Mitchell said, "This process will upgrade our selection system and lower the chance of a (successful) court challenge by women, men, minorities or whatever."

Chief Hansen said the city would be quite vulnerable to lawsuits if nothing were done.

Lincoln Joins Others

Lincoln will join with Omaha, Colorado Springs, Milwaukee, Birmingham, Ala., and other cities in hiring Wollack, Waibel and Associates of Fair Oaks, Calif., to draw up criteria for police entrance exams.

Eventually, Mitchell said, similar revisions will have to be made in entrance tests for firefighters.

Mitchell said it would cost Lincoln between $35,000 and $40,000 to do the study alone.

Applicants for Lincoln police officer now take a series of written, oral, physical and psychological tests.

The California firm will help Lincoln officials revise those tests, specifically in the areas of reading comprehension, writing skills, situational-reasoning, selection standards, oral testing, physical performance and background investigation.

By rewriting the tests, city officials hope to make entrance exams more job related. Recent court cases have held that tests for hiring or promotion must measure the person for the job.

City officials said the next testing program, which should take about a year to write, won't necessarily mean more minority people will qualify for the Police Department.

Skill Reflected

The test will, officials argue, more accurately reflect what skills a person will need to be a police officer.

From 1970 to 1974, Mitchell reported that 1,952 people took entrance exams for the Police Department. Of that number, 158 were hired.

Any of the 1,794 people who were rejected could have challenged the city's selection process, Mitchell said. The new tests, which will be "validated" because of the study, will enable the city to withstand any court challenges, he said.

The Police Department, under Chief Hansen's guidance, has dropped the unofficial restriction banning women from patrol duties. The department will begin assigning women to patrol by January. The city would be opening itself up to a lawsuit otherwise, he has said.

Council To Study Appointees

City Council members said Monday they're going to take this week to review Mayor Helen Boosalis's appointments to the Police Review Board.

Mayor Boosalis submitted seven names to the council, which must either confirm or reject those appointments next Monday.

The mayor's candidates are:

Nancy O'Brien, of 2111 A, a history teacher at Lincoln Northeast; James Kamas of 1208 Mulder, owner of Baker Printing; Stanley Sands, of 2601 Woodscrest, president of Standard Meat Co.; Ted LaRose, of 645 S. 24th, car salesman for Dean Brothers Auto;

B. N. Garcia, of 3027 S. 48th, an estimator for Beall Construction Co.; Ed Wimes, of 4600 Grassridge Rd., student at the University of Nebraska and a Vietnam veteran; and Jack Siegman, of 4045 S. 39th, associate professor sociology at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The mayor chose seven people from a field of 60 who had submitted written resumes to her.

She told the lawmakers the decision was "very difficult,"

Lawmakers Unable To Decide Between Paved, Rock Surface

City lawmakers couldn't decide Monday whether a parking lot to be built near the County-City Building should be graveled or paved.

So the lawmakers delayed action another week.

At issue is whether M. E. Whitehead has to pave a parking lot located on the south side of J between 10th and 11th. Whitehead doesn't want to pave the lot, because he says it will cost more money than he wants to spend. Less cars could be parked on the lot if it were paved, he pointed out.

The planning commission is recommending that the lot be paved. The planners have pointed out that a paved lot would look better than a graveled one, particularly since J St. is being improved between City Hall and the State Capitol Building.

The City Council recently rejected a similar planning commission recommendation urging that a city-owned parking lot be paved instead of graveled. A majority of the council opted for the cheaper graveling.

In other business Monday the council:

$7,758,000 In Damages Awarded In Libel Case

San Francisco (UPI)—A Superior Court jury Monday awarded a record $7,758,000 in damages to prize-winning filmmaker Don Widener in his libel suit against the Pacific Gas & Electric Co.

David E. Pesonen, attorney for Widener, said this was the biggest libel judgment ever awarded to an individual in the United States.

The 12-member jury, after a five-week trial and two days of deliberation, awarded Widner $750,000 in general damages and $7 million in punitive damages.

An $8,000 judgment was made against James C. Carroll, a PG&E engineer, who wrote the original draft of a letter which accused Widener of doctoring a film on the dangers of nuclear power stations.

The one-hour documentary "The Powers That Be" was narrated by actor Jack Lemon and aired on KNBC-TV in Los Angeles in May 1971.

Pesonen said Carroll's letter falsely claimed that Widener inserted in the documentary statements made during a secretly-taped, informal, off-camera interview.

Pesonen told the court that Carroll's letter was revised by the PG&E public relations department. He said the letter all but blacklisted Widener.

The letter was sent to the Federal Communications Commission, the Senate Commerce Committee and the Congressional Joint Committee on Atomic Energy as well as to individual lawmakers in Washington.

DETROIT (AP) — The son of missing ex-Teamsters boss James R. Hoffa has been named to a $400-a-week executive position with Teamsters Local 299.

James P. Hoffa was named to the post after delegates to a Local 299 seminar gave him a standing vote.

The younger Hoffa's father rose to prominence in the Teamsters Union after serving as president of Local 299. He disappeared July 30.

Ex-Oil Official Admits Making Political Gifts

Washington (UPI) — A former Gulf Oil official acknowledges making allegedly illegal campaign contributions to at least 15 senators and congressmen, including cash paid in a hotel men's room and behind a barn, it was learned Monday.

Gulf was convicted in 1973 of making illegal contributions to the 1972 presidential campaign of Richard M. Nixon, and the campaigns of Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., and Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.

But UPI learned the list of alleged recipients has been expanded to at least nine present and former senators including presidential hopeful Fred Harris, six present and former representatives, former Kansas Gov. William Avery and Pennsylvania's "Mr. Republican," George Bloom.

The allegations were made in an Oct. 30 statement to the Securities and Exchange Commission by Frederick Myers, who retired in June as Gulf's legislative coordinator in Washington. Myers worked 47 years for Gulf, the last 16 in Washington.

Myers said he delivered sealed envelopes "maybe four or five or six times a year" to the Capitol Hill offices of senators and representatives between 1960 and 1972 when the Watergate prosecutor began to probe Gulf's campaign activities.

Myers said he made 20 trips outside Washington to deliver sealed envelopes that were addressed with one person's name, usually the elected official or a campaign aide.

In these trips, Myers said he usually went to a hotel or campaign office, delivered the envelope and returned to Washington. Sometimes he was met at the airport, he said.

Myers said he gave one sealed envelope to Sen. Edwin Mechem, R-N.M., "behind the barn" of a New Mexico ranch in 1964. Mechem lost his bid for reelection to Democrat Joseph Montoya.

He said he delivered another to former Rep. Richard Roudebush, R.Ind., in a hotel men's room in Indianapolis.

Myers said he never mentioned Gulf's name, but told each recipient the sealed envelope was from "Mr. Wild."

Claude Wild, who resigned last year as Gulf's top official in Washington, was co-defendant with Gulf in the 1973 conviction for illicit campaign activities. Wild refused to testify against himself when he met with SEC investigators Oct. 29.

Wild pleaded guilty Nov. 13, 1973, to violating the federal law prohibiting corporate political gifts and was fined $1,000. Gulf the same day also entered a guilty plea and was fined $5,000 — in each case, the maximum provided by law.

Myers said he saw the sealed envelopes opened only twice. Both times the envelope was filled with cash, he said.

Payne: LAP Not Taking Active Role In Petitions

The Lincoln Action Program is taking no active role in the petition drive for a grand jury to investigate the deaths of Sherdell Lewis and Elijah Childers, said Jesse Payne, LAP executive director.

Commenting at a LAP board meeting Monday, Payne said the organization, as a community agency, has served as a distribution point for information and for the sale of dance tickets for the Lewis fund. He said however, that those activities do not take up a substantial amount of his staff's time.

Payne did say, though, that he as an individual has been active in work to call a grand jury to investigate the deaths of the two men. Both were killed by police officers in what officially has been termed the line of duty.

"My involvement has been considerable as Jesse Payne, citizen of Lincoln, Neb. I've made no efforts to subdue my role in that capacity," he said.

Payne, who said he grew up with Lewis, believes the slain man's situation was such that LAP would be interested in him, since Lewis was unemployed and a member of a minority.

In other business, Payne announced LAP had insulated 41 homes and provided six others with storm windows in its federally-funded winterization program.

The board was scheduled to approve an affirmative action plan, but was unable to do so because it did not have a quorum.

Machine Fire Slows Work At Kawasaki

A fire in a dust extracting machine at the Kawasaki motorcycle plant, at 6600 N.W. 27th, brought a temporary halt to production in the factory early Monday.

Fire officials report that the fire did considerable damage to the machine, but little or no damage to any other part of the factory. No injuries were reported in the fire.

It was the third such fire in about a month, fire officials said.

David Fairbanks, an engineer at the plant, said the fire was "really very minor," causing only about a 30-minute delay in production.

Fairbanks said the factory is contacting the manufacturer of the dust extractor over the recent problems.

Trial Begins In Colorado For Bookmaking Suspects

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — The trial began on Monday for seven persons charged with operating an interstate bookmaking ring that specialized in gambling on sporting events.

Prosecuting attorney Gary Cornwall told a jury of six men and six women that the seven used false names to accept wagers by telephone on major events, starting in 1972.

He said information on the case came from an informant in Omaha, Neb.

The seven were indicted by a federal grand jury in Denver, but U.S. District Court Judge Fred M. Winner ordered the trial moved to Grand Junction because of publicity about two defendants, Clyde Villano and Clarence M. "Chauncy" Maldone. Maldone is a member of a prominent Denver-area gambling family.

The other defendants are Joseph Nicholas Raso, Larry Scott Owens, Carol Joyce Gardner, Carol Jean Reeb and Alice Whalen.

Spelts Calls Tonga Visit 'Marvelous'

Grand Island (UPI) — Richard Spelts Jr., president of the First National Bank in Grand Island, Monday described his weeklong visit to the Pacific island of Tonga on behalf of the White House and the United States as "a marvelous experience."

Spelts left Oct. 31 for the island, a Pacific nation of 95,000 inhabitants 3,000 miles southwest of Hawaii, to represent the United States at the centennial celebration of the promulgation of the island's constitution.

He was chosen by President Ford to present an engraved copy of the Declaration of Independence to the king of the island during special ceremonies.

"There are very nice portions of Tonga, and there are some very, very bleak areas," Spelts said. "It's extremely hot there, but they call them the friendly islanders and they surely were friendly to us. It was a marvelous experience and I hope we represented our country in a manner that would make our country and the President proud of our participation."

A task force for world hunger was organized with Dr. Lloyd Ambrosius as chairman.

'Kiting' Scheme Leaves 2 Banks Holding The Bag

Police Monday were investigating an apparent check "kiting" scheme that left two Lincoln banks holding the bag for about $3,800.

Police said a bleached-blonde woman in her early twenties opened a checking account at the First National Bank with a deposit of a $900 check on a Texas bank.

Before bank officials learned the deposit check was bogus, about $600 worth of checks had been written on the account, according to police reports.

In the meantime, the woman opened an account at the National Bank of Commerce with a $200 deposit. Police reports said the woman wrote about $3,200 worth of checks on the account.

Steel Output Falls

New York (AP)—Steel production fell to 2,058,000 net tons in the week ended Nov. 8, a decrease of 1.6% over the preceding week's 2,071,000 net tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported.

Man Sought In Rape Of Lincolnite

A 21-year-old woman was raped by a man who broke into her bedroom while she was sleeping early Monday morning, according to police reports.

Police said the man apparently got into the house through a living room window. The woman's husband was working at the time.

The woman, who lives in north-central Lincoln, told police the man verbally threatened to harm her 1-year-old child, then held a pillow over her head while he raped her.

The woman described the man as about 40 years old, heavy, with long, thin hair, bald on the top.

Police also were searching for a man who walked into an 18-year-old woman's apartment Sunday night with a hunting knife and forced her to commit oral copulation.

She described the man as weighing 230 pounds, about six feet tall, with brown hair, and wearing a green army jacket, a faded yellow shirt, and blue jeans with a patch on the left knee and black stitching forming the words, "kiss my —." The woman said the man smelled of gas and oil.

Shoppers Win One

New York (UPI)—Shoppers looking for small amounts of packaged produce now have the law on their side. An amendment to the New York state agriculture and markets law requires merchants to post a sign conspicuously announcing that smaller quantities of fresh fruits and vegetables are available upon request. The law defines small quantity as an amount, by weight or volume, that is smaller than the amount offered for prepackaged sale.

Ex-Oil Official Admits Making Political Gifts

Washington (UPI) — A former Gulf Oil official acknowledges making allegedly illegal campaign contributions to at least 15 senators and congressmen, including cash paid in a hotel men's room and behind a barn, it was learned Monday.

Gulf was convicted in 1973 of making illegal contributions to the 1972 presidential campaign of Richard M. Nixon, and the campaigns of Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., and Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.

But UPI learned the list of alleged recipients has been expanded to at least nine present and former senators including presidential hopeful Fred Harris, six present and former representatives, former Kansas Gov. William Avery and Pennsylvania's "Mr. Republican," George Bloom.

The allegations were made in an Oct. 30 statement to the Securities and Exchange Commission by Frederick Myers, who retired in June as Gulf's legislative coordinator in Washington. Myers worked 47 years for Gulf, the last 16 in Washington.

Myers said he delivered sealed envelopes "maybe four or five or six times a year" to the Capitol Hill offices of senators and representatives between 1960 and 1972 when the Watergate prosecutor began to probe Gulf's campaign activities.

Myers said he made 20 trips outside Washington to deliver sealed envelopes that were addressed with one person's name, usually the elected official or a campaign aide.

In these trips, Myers said he usually went to a hotel or campaign office, delivered the envelope and returned to Washington. Sometimes he was met at the airport, he said.

Myers said he gave one sealed envelope to Sen. Edwin Mechem, R-N.M., "behind the barn" of a New Mexico ranch in 1964. Mechem lost his bid for reelection to Democrat Joseph Montoya.

He said he delivered another to former Rep. Richard Roudebush, R.Ind., in a hotel men's room in Indianapolis.

Myers said he never mentioned Gulf's name, but told each recipient the sealed envelope was from "Mr. Wild."

Claude Wild, who resigned last year as Gulf's top official in Washington, was co-defendant with Gulf in the 1973 conviction for illicit campaign activities. Wild refused to testify against himself when he met with SEC investigators Oct. 29.

Wild pleaded guilty Nov. 13, 1973, to violating the federal law prohibiting corporate political gifts and was fined $1,000. Gulf the same day also entered a guilty plea and was fined $5,000 — in each case, the maximum provided by law.

Myers said he saw the sealed envelopes opened only twice. Both times the envelope was filled with cash, he said.

Payne: LAP Not Taking Active Role In Petitions

The Lincoln Action Program is taking no active role in the petition drive for a grand jury to investigate the deaths of Sherdell Lewis and Elijah Childers, said Jesse Payne, LAP executive director.

Commenting at a LAP board meeting Monday, Payne said the organization, as a community agency, has served as a distribution point for information and for the sale of dance tickets for the Lewis fund. He said however, that those activities do not take up a substantial amount of his staff's time.

Payne did say, though, that he as an individual has been active in work to call a grand jury to investigate the deaths of the two men. Both were killed by police officers in what officially has been termed the line of duty.

"My involvement has been considerable as Jesse Payne, citizen of Lincoln, Neb. I've made no efforts to subdue my role in that capacity," he said.

Payne, who said he grew up with Lewis, believes the slain man's situation was such that LAP would be interested in him, since Lewis was unemployed and a member of a minority.

In other business, Payne announced LAP had insulated 41 homes and provided six others with storm windows in its federally-funded winterization program.

The board was scheduled to approve an affirmative action plan, but was unable to do so because it did not have a quorum.

Machine Fire Slows Work At Kawasaki

A fire in a dust extracting machine at the Kawasaki motorcycle plant, at 6600 N.W. 27th, brought a temporary halt to production in the factory early Monday.

Fire officials report that the fire did considerable damage to the machine, but little or no damage to any other part of the factory. No injuries were reported in the fire.

It was the third such fire in about a month, fire officials said.

David Fairbanks, an engineer at the plant, said the fire was "really very minor," causing only about a 30-minute delay in production.

Fairbanks said the factory is contacting the manufacturer of the dust extractor over the recent problems.

Spelts Calls Tonga Visit 'Marvelous'

Grand Island (UPI) — Richard Spelts Jr., president of the First National Bank in Grand Island, Monday described his weeklong visit to the Pacific island of Tonga on behalf of the White House and the United States as "a marvelous experience."

Spelts left Oct. 31 for the island, a Pacific nation of 95,000 inhabitants 3,000 miles southwest of Hawaii, to represent the United States at the centennial celebration of the promulgation of the island's constitution.

He was chosen by President Ford to present an engraved copy of the Declaration of Independence to the king of the island during special ceremonies.

"There are very nice portions of Tonga, and there are some very, very bleak areas," Spelts said. "It's extremely hot there, but they call them the friendly islanders and they surely were friendly to us. It was a marvelous experience and I hope we represented our country in a manner that would make our country and the President proud of our participation."

Trial Begins In Colorado For Bookmaking Suspects

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — The trial began on Monday for seven persons charged with operating an interstate bookmaking ring that specialized in gambling on sporting events.

Prosecuting attorney Gary Cornwall told a jury of six men and six women that the seven used false names to accept wagers by telephone on major events, starting in 1972.

He said information on the case came from an informant in Omaha, Neb.

The seven were indicted by a federal grand jury in Denver, but U.S. District Court Judge Fred M. Winner ordered the trial moved to Grand Junction because of publicity about two defendants, Clyde Villano and Clarence M. "Chauncy" Maldone. Maldone is a member of a prominent Denver-area gambling family.

The other defendants are Joseph Nicholas Raso, Larry Scott Owens, Carol Joyce Gardner, Carol Jean Reeb and Alice Whalen.

'Kiting' Scheme Leaves 2 Banks Holding The Bag

Police Monday were investigating an apparent check "kiting" scheme that left two Lincoln banks holding the bag for about $3,800.

Police said a bleached-blonde woman in her early twenties opened a checking account at the First National Bank with a deposit of a $900 check on a Texas bank.

Before bank officials learned the deposit check was bogus, about $600 worth of checks had been written on the account, according to police reports.

In the meantime, the woman opened an account at the National Bank of Commerce with a $200 deposit. Police reports said the woman wrote about $3,200 worth of checks on the account.

New York (AP)—Steel production fell to 2,058,000 net tons in the week ended Nov. 8, a decrease of 1.6% over the preceding week's 2,071,000 net tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported.

Man Sought In Rape Of Lincolnite

A 21-year-old woman was raped by a man who broke into her bedroom while she was sleeping early Monday morning, according to police reports.

Police said the man apparently got into the house through a living room window. The woman's husband was working at the time.

The woman, who lives in north-central Lincoln, told police the man verbally threatened to harm her 1-year-old child, then held a pillow over her head while he raped her.

The woman described the man as about 40 years old, heavy, with long, thin hair, bald on the top.

Police also were searching for a man who walked into an 18-year-old woman's apartment Sunday night with a hunting knife and forced her to commit oral copulation.

She described the man as weighing 230 pounds, about six feet tall, with brown hair, and wearing a green army jacket, a faded yellow shirt, and blue jeans with a patch on the left knee and black stitching forming the words, "kiss my —." The woman said the man smelled of gas and oil.

Shoppers Win One

New York (UPI)—Shoppers looking for small amounts of packaged produce now have the law on their side. An amendment to the New York state agriculture and markets law requires merchants to post a sign conspicuously announcing that smaller quantities of fresh fruits and vegetables are available upon request. The law defines small quantity as an amount, by weight or volume, that is smaller than the amount offered for prepackaged sale.

Equal Credit Law Provisions Outlined

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — The law bestowing equal credit rights on women is now in effect. However, it will be more than a year before all its provisions go into operation. Here's a checklist for you to keep, spelling out your new rights and when you can claim them:

— As of Oct. 28, 1975: Lenders may not refuse you credit solely because of your sex or marital status If denied credit, you may request an explanation, which can be given either orally or in writing. Anyone planning to challenge her rejection should write down an oral explanation and ask the lender to initial it.

A lender cannot inquire into your childbearing intentions or birth control practices. Nor can he assume that just because you're young and recently married you're likely to get pregnant and quit your job. However, laws don't change people's basic convictions. Young, recently married women should weigh carefully any reason given for refusing them credit. in case it's just a lame excuse.

A woman applying for credit on her own can use the credit history of accounts carried in the name of her husband or ex-husband, if she also used them. Conversely, if the joint credit history is bad, she can present reasons why it should not reflect on her personal ability or willingness to pay.

— As of Nov. 30, 1975: It's illegal for lenders to say anything that would discourage women from seeking credit on account of their sex. Married women may open or maintain a charge account in their own names, their maiden names, or in maiden names hyphenated with their husband's names.

Also, a wife's income cannot be unfairly discounted when a couple applies for a loan. Lenders may make a reasonable judgment as to whether that income is likely to continue. However, they may not automatically assume that part-time income is unstable.

You need not reveal that you receive alimony if you are not depending on it to prove your creditworthiness. However, where you do rely on it, the lender is entitled to ask such things as whether it's paid under court order and how long you've received it. You may need your ex-husband's permission for the lender to check up on his credit rating. The purpose of all this is to ascertain whether your alimony check is likely to continue.

— As of Jan 31, 1976: Women cannot be asked to find co-signers for loans when men in their circumstances would not. However, wives in many states will find that, because of state law, their husband's signatures are still needed on their loans and charge accounts. In Louisiana, for example, married women are still not entitled to manage their own earnings, so lenders need the husband's assurances that the bills will be paid. A husband's signature is also called for if a loan is secured with property in which he has an interest.

If you get a divorce, a store can ask you to reapply for credit in your own name if the previous account was granted on the basis of the husband's income. This means that many newly divorced women are still subject to having their charge accounts reevaluated, and possibly closed. Stores cannot ask for new applications if the account was based on your own income. However, if you're newly divorced and show any evidence of being broke — such as missing two monthly payments — your account can be closed.

— As of June 30, 1976: Lenders have to have all their new credit forms in operation. You are then entitled to a printed reminder of the non-discrimination law, including information on where to complain if you smell a rat.

In general, you cannot be asked your marital status. But you can in community property states (because your earnings may be seized for your husband's debts), and in any other state where the husband has an interest in your assets.

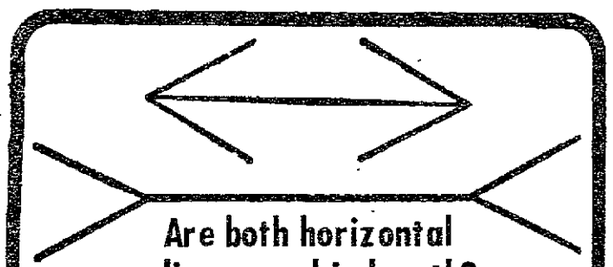

A lender may also ask about your husband, and his credit rating, if he will use the account, if he's contractually liable for it, or if you rely in any way on his income to prove your own creditworthiness. In other words, most married women who don't work outside the home, or whose earnings are small, will still have to supply information about their husband to open an account.

Where marital status is a factor, however, you can be listed only as married, unmarried or separated — not as widowed or divorced.

— As of Nov. 1, 1976: Stores must report the credit history of charge accounts used by married couples in both their names, so as to give married women a credit history. For accounts opened before that date, stores may mail the customers a letter, asking them if they want the credit history reported in both names.

But just because lenders can no longer discriminate doesn't mean that women are automatically entitled to credit. In my next column I'll cover what having credit means, and which women still won't get it.

Antitrust Probe Talk Hurts GM

NEW YORK (AP) — Talk of a possible antitrust investigation put General Motors shares under pressure in the stock market Monday, but most other issues incurred little damage.

GM, the day's most active issue, opened late because of an order imbalance and fell 2⅛ to 55½.

But the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials lost only .32 to 835.48—and it would have posted a gain of about a point had it not been for the drop in GM.

Declines nosed out advances 763 to 638 among the 1,836 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume eased off to 14.91 million shares from 15.93 million on Friday.

News reports over the weekend said the staff of the Federal Trade Commission was discussing the possibility of an antitrust probe of General Motors, the nation's largest manufacturing company.

The reports also noted, however, that the staff had not yet made any recommendation to the commission itself.

Brokers pointed out that the prospect of possible antitrust pressure on GM was hardly new, and they added that if any government case were begun it would probably take years.

The company's stock gave evidence, nevertheless, that the published reports had had a psychological impact on investors.

GM often is regarded as a market leader whose ups and downs can influence over-all trading trends. But this time most other issues seemed immobilized by continued uncertainty over New York City's money problems and their potential impact on the economy.

"The New York City situation is the big thing for the market now, and it's just shrugging off all the other news, good or bad," said Charles Jensen at Merkin & Co.

Equal Credit Law Provisions Outlined

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — The law bestowing equal credit rights on women is now in effect. However, it will be more than a year before all its provisions go into operation. Here's a checklist for you to keep, spelling out your new rights and when you can claim them:

— As of Oct. 28, 1975: Lenders may not refuse you credit solely because of your sex or marital status. If denied credit, you may request an explanation, which can be given either orally or in writing. Anyone planning to challenge her rejection should write down an oral explanation and ask the lender to initial it.

A lender cannot inquire into your childbearing intentions or birth control practices. Nor can he assume that just because you're young and recently married you're likely to get pregnant and quit your job. However, laws don't change people's basic convictions. Young, recently married women should weigh carefully any reason given for refusing them credit, in case it's just a lame excuse.

A woman applying for credit on her own can use the credit history of accounts carried in the name of her husband or ex-husband, if she also used them. Conversely, if the joint credit history is bad, she can present reasons why it should not reflect on her personal ability or willingness to pay.

— As of Nov. 30, 1975: It's illegal for lenders to say anything that would discourage women from seeking credit on account of their sex. Married women may open or maintain a charge account in their own names, their maiden names, or in maiden names hyphenated with their husband's names.

Also, a wife's income cannot be unfairly discounted when a couple applies for a loan. Lenders may make a reasonable judgment as to whether that income is likely to continue. However, they may not automatically assume that part-time income is unstable.

You need not reveal that you receive alimony if you are not depending on it to prove your creditworthiness. However, where you do rely on it, the lender is entitled to ask such things as whether it's paid under court order and how long you've received it. You may need your ex-husband's permission for the lender to check up on his credit rating. The purpose of all this is to ascertain whether your alimony check is likely to continue.

— As of Jan. 31, 1976: Women cannot be asked to find co-signers for loans when men in their circumstances would not. However, wives in many states will find that, because of state law, their husband's signatures are still needed on their loans and charge accounts. In Louisiana, for example, married women are still not entitled to manage their own earnings, so lenders need the husband's assurances that the bills will be paid. A husband's signature is also called for if a loan is secured with property in which he has an interest.

If you get a divorce, a store can ask you to reapply for credit in your own name if the previous account was granted on the basis of the husband's income. This means that many newly divorced women are still subject to having their charge accounts reevaluated, and possibly closed. Stores cannot ask for new applications if the account was based on your own income. However, if you're newly divorced and show any evidence of being broke — such as missing two monthly payments — your account can be closed.

— As of June 30, 1976: Lenders have to have all their new credit forms in operation. You are then entitled to a printed reminder of the non-discrimination law, including information on where to complain if you smell a rat.

In general, you cannot be asked your marital status. But you can in community property states (because your earnings may be seized for your husband's debts), and in any other state where the husband has an interest in your assets.

A lender may also ask about your husband, and his credit rating, if he will use the account, if he's contracturally liable for it, or if you rely in any way on his income to prove your own creditworthiness. In other words, most married women who don't work outside the home, or whose earnings are small, will still have to supply information about their husband to open an account.

Where marital status is a factor, however, you can be listed only as married, unmarried or separated — not as widowed or divorced.

— As of Nov. 1, 1976: Stores must report the credit history of charge accounts used by married couples in both their names, so as to give married women a credit history. For accounts opened before that date, stores may mail the customers a letter, asking them if they want the credit history reported in both names.

But just because lenders can no longer discriminate doesn't mean that women are automatically entitled to credit. In my next column I'll cover what having credit means, and which women still won't get it.

Like our 675 copier. Like our 675 copier. Like our 675 copier.

The 675 has fewer moving parts. And fewer chances of anything going wrong. Take roll-feed, for example. It completely eliminates the jamming that happens when single sheets are picked up from a stack. Also, we keep the original outside the machine where it can't clog the works inside the machine—or get crumbled up. So, you see, our 675 is designed to keep troubles away so you can do more work. Antitrust Probe Talk Hurts GM

NEW YORK (AP) — Talk of a possible antitrust investigation put General Motors shares under pressure in the stock market Monday, but most other issues incurred little damage.

GM, the day's most active issue, opened late because of an order imbalance and fell 2⅛ to 55½.

But the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials lost only .32 to 835.48—and it would have posted a gain of about a point had it not been for the drop in GM.

Declines nosed out advances 763 to 638 among the 1,836 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume eased off to 14.91 million shares from 15.93 million on Friday.

News reports over the weekend said the staff of the Federal Trade Commission was discussing the possibility of an antitrust probe of General Motors, the nation's largest manufacturing company.

The reports also noted, however, that the staff had not yet made any recommendation to the commission itself.

Brokers pointed out that the prospect of possible antitrust pressure on GM was hardly new, and they added that if any government case were begun it would probably take years.

The company's stock gave evidence, nevertheless, that the published reports had had a psychological impact on investors.

GM often is regarded as a market leader whose ups and downs can influence over-all trading trends. But this time most other issues seemed immobilized by continued uncertainty over New York City's money problems and their potential impact on the economy.

"The New York City situation is the big thing for the market now, and it's just shrugging off all the other news, good or bad," said Charles Jensen at Merkin & Co.

Committee Okays Power Unit Study

The Legislature's Public Works Committee Monday unanimously approved a scaled-down study of Nebraska's public power districts.

Originally, plans called for a $48,000 study; however, it had to be reduced to a $30,000 project due to budget constrictions.

Sen. Richard Lewis of Holbrook said the committee was completely satisfied that the reduction in scope of the study will not downgrade its usefulness.

Adam Kubik of the O'Brien & Gere engineering firm of Syracuse, N.Y., said the reduction will "in no way hurt the integrity of the study . . . It will be of equal viability and reliability."

The reduced budget will force Kubik to make spot checks rather than in-depth studies of the power situation, Lewis said.

Nevertheless, Kubik said, "I would feel more comfortable with the initial budget proposal."

Lewis noted that Kubik's report could be completed by Jan. 10 — giving legislators sufficient time to act, if needed.

The Legislature's Executive Board, however, must first approve the contract before work can begin, Lewis said. He said he hopes to get board action within a day.

LT&T Seeks Boost In Residential Rates

One-party residential telephone rates in Lincoln will jump from $6.60 to $7.60 per month, if the Nebraska Public Service Commission acts favorably on a request from Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Co. (LT&T).

LT&T Monday filed a schedule of suggested rates to raise the $3.8 million in increased revenue authorized several weeks ago by the commission.

No increase has been proposed for pay phone calls, according to commission communications chief Herb Sherdon.

Other proposed increases for Lincoln area exchanges are: two-party residential from $5.80 to $6.80 a month; multi-party service from $6.25 to $7.20 a month; business one-party from $17.75 to $21.90 a month; and rural one-party from $6.25 to $7.20 a month.

The commission may act on the new rates later this week. The rates will become effective shortly afterwards.

PSC Gives NFO Notice To Seek Dealers License

The Nebraska Public Service Commission has given the National Farmers Organization (NFO) until Friday to file for a grain dealers license or else face legal action.

Richard Sanne, chief of the commission's grain warehouse division, said the commission has determined that the NFO does act as an agent for its members in the marketing of grain and consequently should be licensed.

Sanne said unofficial word is that NFO markets an average of $7 million worth of grain each month.

The commission has been communicating with NFO officials over the past few months on the subject. To get a license, NFO would have to get a bond based on the number of trucks it operates or its financial condition.

The State Department of Agriculture has issued a show cause order directing NFO officials to appear Nov. 20 to discuss a livestock dealers license for the organization.

Sanne said the commission will also consider a show cause order should the NFO not respond.

Nixon Denies Plans For TV

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon has denied reports he has plans to become a radio or television commentator.

"Television and radio commentaries would not be the best use of my time," Nixon said in a letter to Paul Stanford of WNEB.

Stanford, who described himself as a friend and supporter of the former president, said Monday that Nixon's immediate projects included the writing of his memoirs and four television documentary shows in 1977.

Committee Okays Power Unit Study

The Legislature's Public Works Committee Monday unanimously approved a scaled-down study of Nebraska's public power districts.

Originally, plans called for a $48,000 study; however, it had to be reduced to a $30,000 project due to budget constrictions.

Sen. Richard Lewis of Holbrook said the committee was completely satisfied that the reduction in scope of the study will not downgrade its usefulness.

Adam Kubik of the O'Brien & Gere engineering firm of Syracuse, N.Y., said the reduction will "in no way hurt the integrity of the study . . . It will be of equal viability and reliability."

The reduced budget will force Kubik to make spot checks rather than in-depth studies of the power situation, Lewis said.

Nevertheless, Kubik said, "I would feel more comfortable with the initial budget proposal."

Lewis noted that Kubik's report could be completed by Jan. 10 — giving legislators sufficient time to act, if needed.

The Legislature's Executive Board, however, must first approve the contract before work can begin, Lewis said. He said he hopes to get board action within a day.

LT&T Seeks Boost In Residential Rates

One-party residential telephone rates in Lincoln will jump from $6.60 to $7.60 per month, if the Nebraska Public Service Commission acts favorably on a request from Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Co. (LT&T).

LT&T Monday filed a schedule of suggested rates to raise the $3.8 million in increased revenue authorized several weeks ago by the commission.

No increase has been proposed for pay phone calls, according to commission communications chief Herb Sherdon.

Other proposed increases for Lincoln area exchanges are: two-party residential from $5.80 to $6.80 a month; multi-party service from $6.25 to $7.20 a month; business one-party from $17.75 to $21.90 a month; and rural one-party from $6.25 to $7.20 a month.

The commission may act on the new rates later this week. The rates will become effective shortly afterwards.

PSC Gives NFO Notice To Seek Dealers License

The Nebraska Public Service Commission has given the National Farmers Organization (NFO) until Friday to file for a grain dealers license or else face legal action.

Richard Sanne, chief of the commission's grain warehouse division, said the commission has determined that the NFO does act as an agent for its members in the marketing of grain and consequently should be licensed.

Sanne said unofficial word is that NFO markets an average of $7 million worth of grain each month.

The commission has been communicating with NFO officials over the past few months on the subject. To get a license, NFO would have to get a bond based on the number of trucks it operates or its financial condition.

The State Department of Agriculture has issued a show cause order directing NFO officials to appear Nov. 20 to discuss a livestock dealers license for the organization.

Sanne said the commission will also consider a show cause order should the NFO not respond.

Nixon Denies Plans For TV

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon has denied reports he has plans to become a radio or television commentator.

"Television and radio commentaries would not be the best use of my time," Nixon said in a letter to Paul Stanford of WNEB.

Stanford, who described himself as a friend and supporter of the former president, said Monday that Nixon's immediate projects included the writing of his memoirs and four television documentary shows in 1977.

Otoe Authorities Release Name Of Missing Man

Nebraska City (AP)—Otoe County authorities Monday released the identity of a man believed drowned in the Missouri River.

Officials identified the man as Paul Cattorn, 43, residence unknown.

Catthorn and another man, Wilber E. Reavis, 27, of Newton, Iowa, were thrown into the river last Wednesday when their homemade boat washed up against a barge at a grain elevator terminal here, then capsized.

Reavis was rescued, but searchers have not been able to find Cattorn's body. The search for the body was terminated last Friday.

Reavis said he was not fully acquainted with Cattorn, and that the missing man was just along for the ride down the river.

Hunting Mishap Near Crawford Kills Omahan

Crawford (AP)—An Omaha man, Michael L. Hooton, 20, was pronounced dead on arrival at a local hospital early Monday following an apparent hunting accident.

Dawes County Sheriff Lester Jensen said the accident occurred on state land about seven miles north of here.

According to Jensen, Hooton's father, Lynn B. Hooton, 46, took a shot at a deer. However, the elder Hooton's rifle jammed, and as he tried to fix the weapon, it discharged, striking the son, who was sitting in a four-wheel drive vehicle about 20 feet away.

Bentsen Discounts Primaries

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Unlike some of his Democratic presidential rivals, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas does not believe next year's early primaries will point to the eventual nominee.

Bentsen foresees a much longer sorting out process in which Democrats must eventually turn to a centrist candidate.

"I don't think we'll see someone emerge out of those first few primaries," Bentsen told a Lincoln press conference Monday.

"And I don't think someone is going to win on the first ballot at the convention."

Democrats next year will be "looking for someone they can win with," he said. And that must be a nominee who can "appeal to the broad center" of American politics.

'Looking At Him'

Who? "I think you are looking at him," Bentsen declared.

In his first presidential primary foray into Nebraska, the Texas said he is ready to "start putting together" a statewide campaign organization for what he said will be an active bid for votes and delegates next May.

"I've spent a lot of time here,"

Lloyd Bentsen

he recalled. "I've got a lot of friends."

Bentsen formally headed Lincoln Liberty Life Insurance Co.

The crowded Democratic presidential race is "wide open," he said. "A lot of people are looking for a new face. Hopefully, it will be mine."

Bentsen said only the Democrats can beat themselves in next year's presidential showdown.

Ford 'Hurt Image'

President Ford, he said, "hurt his image as a good guy" with last week's removal of major administration figures.

Ford had enjoyed a reputation for "credibility and openness in communication" when compared to the administration of Richard Nixon, the Texan noted.

Vice President Nelson Rockefeller withdrew from the 1976 presidential ticket because of "pressure (designed) to try to gain support from the more conservative wing of the Republican Party," Bentsen said.

'Policy Differences'

Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger was bounced because of "obvious policy differences" with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, the senator observed.

But, Bentsen said, he believes "a conflict of ideas would be of benefit to his (Ford's) presidency."

In any event, he said, after Kissinger's recent policy victories over both Defense and the Department of Agriculture, the secretary of state will emerge with "his role enlarged."

As for his own policy views, Bentsen proposed moderation of interest rates and an employment tax credit as means of spurring economic recovery for the U.S.

"The Federal Reserve has been much too tight with money," he said.

That makes it difficult for people "to meet their monthly payments on their homes," for business investment and for local government to finance needed projects, he said.

10% Tax Credit

His employment plan would provide a 10% tax credit for the employment of unemployed people up to the first $8,000 in salary over the first year.

That would provide an $800 tax credit per employe, but the money would need to be invested back into job-creating equipment.

Bentsen said the plan could add 600,000 to one million unemployed persons to the work force within a year.

The senator also called for a farm policy which would "moderate the present boom and bust cycles" and an energy program which would develop coal resources while seeking long-term alternative energy sources.

"Sometimes I think we have the attention span of a 5-year-old child in this country," he said. "We've got to work on these problems now."

Inmate Escamilla Asks New Trial In Stabbing

By United Press International

A State Penal Complex inmate, convicted of second-degree murder in the stabbing death of another inmate, Monday asked the Nebraska Supreme Court for a new trial.

Attorneys for Alvaro Escamilla asked for the new trial saying there were problems with a confession he made.

The murder charges stemmed from the stabbing death of Luther W. Wilson on Oct. 13, 1974, in the prison yard. Escamilla was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

The confession, the man's attorneys noted, was ruled illegal by the Lancaster County District Court and was, therefore, not used against him during the trial.

However, the attorneys contended, even though the confession wasn't used, its existence did have an impact on Escamilla. The attorneys said he was afraid that it might be brought up.

"Defendant contends that the fear that his previously obtained illegal confession would be used in an attempt to impeach him so 'chilled' the free exercise of his constitutional privilege to testify in his own behalf that it amounted to a denial of his due process rights," the attorneys said.

Escamilla was serving a 50-year prison term for burglary at the time the stabbing occurred. The district court ordered that the 15-year sentence run consecutively with his current sentence.

His attorneys asked that if the high court wouldn't at least grant a new trial that at least it modify the sentence to run concurrently with the burglary term.

Bell Contracts For Marine Combat Vehicle

Buffalo (AP) — Bell Aerospace said it has received a $278,000 contract to help design and test a new combat vehicle for the U.S. Marine Corps.

Bell, a division of Textron, Inc., said the vehicle will be supported by a cushion of air while traveling over water.

The vehicle will carry 25 Marines at speeds of 35 to 70 miles an hour on water and 40 to 55 on land, Bell said.

The current Marine assault vehicle, Bell said, moves at eight miles an hour over water and 40 over land.

McCollister Formally Enters Race

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Though it has been no secret for some time, Rep. John Yetter McCollister Monday announced his official candidacy for the Republican U.S. Senate nomination in 1976.

The 54-year-old lawmaker made his formal announcements in press conferences scattered across the state — in Omaha, Lincoln, Grand Island, North Platte and Scottsbluff.

He said his "issue-oriented, vigorous campaign" will "focus strictly on the issues" and he pledged to travel to every city and village in the state during the next year.

He declined to comment on "anyone who may or may not run against me . . . This is an issue between Nebraskans and me," he said.

Endorsed By Hruska

The three-term Republican congressman is seeking the seat being vacated by Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb. McCollister received Hruska's blessing as his successor when the veteran lawmaker announced his retirement earlier this year.

So far the Omaha Republican faces token party opposition from former State Sen. Richard Proud of Omaha. Former State Democratic Party Chairman Hess Dyas of Lincoln has said he will seek his party's nomination. And Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky, a Republican, has said if he decides to seek the Senate seat, he will switch parties and run as a Democrat.

Asked about a possible Democratic bid by Zorinsky, McCollister said, "I have some things I could say, but right now I have no comment."

'Too Often Personal'

He also declined to respond to personal-political charges by Proud, saying he thinks politics "too often is characterized by personal attacks and too seldom by discussion of issues. I will try to avoid personal attacks," he promised.

McCollister said one of the major themes of his campaign will be the "impact big government makes on our lives." He promised to fight for the rights of small businessmen and farmers, both of which, he said, he identifies closely with.

He said Nebraskans need a "strong and persuasive voice in the U.S. Senate" and "deserve a senator with a proven track record."

Although not everyone will agree with his congressional record, McCollister said, "Every Nebraskan can know where I stand on the issues."

And every Nebraskan can be assured, he said, "that I will continue in the Senate my same philosophy and approach to government which has shaped my record in the House."

More Markets Needed

Commenting on the recent Russian grain deal, he said, "I hope we can sell all the grain we can, anywhere we can sell it. Nebraska depends on healthy grain sales . . . We need to work to develop foreign markets rather than limit them."

He also said he thinks agriculture should be excluded as a "tool in making foreign policy."

McCollister, who headed his own manufacturing firm and who still maintains the family farm near Iowa City, Iowa, is the ranking Republican on the consumer protection and finance subcommittee and the subcommittee on regulatory agencies.

Paul Amen, board chairman of the National Bank of Commerce in Lincoln, is McCollister's statewide campaign chairman. McCollister said he has also recruited 10 regional chairmen, many of whom are new to partisan politics.

John Y. McCollister

Dyas Calls McC 'Part Of Problem'

Democratic senatorial aspirant Hess Dyas of Lincoln Monday said Republican candidate John McCollister has been "part of the problem rather than part of the solution."

McCollister, the Second District congressman, officially announced his Senate candidacy Monday.

Dyas plans to formally enter the race next January.

"Everyone agrees that government out to be fiscally responsible, but since McCollister has been in Congress the national debt has increased faster than anytime in our history," Dyas said.

"Instead of working for tax reform that would close the loopholes that allow oil companies and big corporations to make record profits, John McCollister has co-sponsored a bill that would provide dozens of new loopholes at the expense of the average taxpayer."

Both McCollister and Dyas may "share a recognition that increasingly serious problems exist in this country," the Democrat said.

But "so-called leaders like (retiring) Sen. Roman Hruska and his own self-appointed successor, Rep. McCollister" have been part of the problem, Dyas said.

Cavanaugh Sharply Raps Statement By McCollister

By The Associated Press

Omaha State Sen. John Cavanaugh Monday sharply attacked Rep. John Y. McCollister for saying default by New York City could help Omaha and Nebraska.

"That's the dumbest statement I've ever heard a public official say," Cavanaugh said in an interview.

Cavanaugh is an unannounced candidate for the Democratic nomination for McCollister's congressional seat. McCollister is an announced candidate for the U.S. Senate.

Cavanaugh said default by New York City would increase the interest rates paid by all cities on their bonds. He said property taxpayers would have to pay for the increase.

"I hope that his wife keeps his check book for him," Cavanaugh said.

Both Exon, Warner Pleased By Opinion

Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas Monday performed an act some felt near miraculous: he issued an opinion on the meaning of "express obligations" which pleased both Gov. J. James Exon and Sen. Jerome Warner, two long-time antagonists.

Douglas said in setting the 1976 sales and income tax rates, the State Board of Equalization and Assessment should consider only the "express obligations" spelled out in law.

Any deliberation going beyond those specifics might infringe on legislative duties, Douglas said, because the law is "vague" as to what other express obligations are.

As a result, the five Board of Equalization members Monday decided not to put into rule and regulation form what it considers all express obligations to be.

When the board meets Saturday to set the 1976 tax rates, it will essentially compute the rates using the future obligations stated in law.

Gov. J. James Exon, the board's chairman, who has been criticized for not defining all anticipated but unappropriated obligations for tax-setting purposes, said Douglas's opinion supports his past position.

Basically, the express obligations spelled out in law include the personal property tax exemptions, homestead exemptions, resource development fund and capital construction.

"This is exactly what we considered in the past," Exon said.

Warner said he is "delighted" with Douglas's ruling. "It's a positive ruling and is consistent with what I wrote (in a letter to the Board of Equalization)."

Warner disputed Exon's contention that the ruling legitimatized the board's past actions. "They haven't considered (express obligations mentioned in law) once. The Department of Administrative Services didn't certify to the board these obligations.

"They can't duck it anymore," Warner concluded.

Exon's critics have contended had the board considered these obligations in setting past tax rates, the state might not now be facing its cash flow problems.

Exon has responded to these critics, asking them if they considered express obligations when the Legislature limited the 1975 income tax to 12%.

Burglars Take Guns, Ammo; Owner Hunting

Belongings valued at more than $5,000 were taken in a burglary at the Jack T. Kneifl home at 2607 Picadilly Ct., according to police reports Monday.

Six handguns, two shotguns, four rifles, 4,000 to 7,000 rounds of ammunition, an electric typewriter, a movie camera and an electric adding machine were taken.

Police said the burglar or burglars broke into the home while Kneifel was away on a hunting trip.

The burglar or burglars apparently used a credit card, slipping it between the door jamb and door, to push the door's bolt back, police said.

In another burglary reported over the weekend, about $3,400 worth of checks were stolen from Eno Meat at 1911 R. Police said entrance to the business was made by breaking a window.

Coal Slurry Pipeline Bill Hearings Set

State Sen. Maurice Kremer of Aurora announced Monday the Public Works Committee will hold hearings in Ogallala and Bridgeport on the proposed coal slurry pipeline.

Kremer said the committee will open the Ogallala hearing at 10:30 a.m. next Monday and will open the Bridgeport hearing at 7:30 a.m. on the same date.

Before the Legislature is a bill which would give coal slurry pipelines the power of eminent domain.

The bill was prompted by a plan to build a pipeline from the Wyoming coal fields to Arkansas, which would stretch across northern Nebraska. The pipeline is being proposed by Energy Transport Systems Inc.

The bill on eminent domain powers was introduced during this year's session. But the lawmakers decided to hold action on it until the 1976 session pending results of an interim study.

Unicam Okays Appointments Made By Exon

The Legislature Monday voted to confirm Gov. J. James Exon's appointments made since the last session adjourned, including three department heads.

The Unicameral voted to confirm E. Benjamin Nelson, director of the Department of Insurance; Jack Cleavenger, director of the Department of Public Institutions, and R. James Pearson, director of the Department of Motor Vehicles.

The Legislature also voted to approve the appointment of Phil Weaver to the Liquor Control Commission, Karl E. Dickinson to the State Highway Commission and George Rebensdorf to the State College Board of Trustees.

Stenberg Seeks Legislative Seat Held By Fowler

Don Stenberg, a Lincoln attorney, has announced his candidacy for the 27th District legislative seat, a post held by Sen. Steve Fowler.

In announcing his candidacy, Stenberg said Nebraska needs to make greater efforts in the fields of energy conservation and research.

Stenberg, 27, compared his political philosophy to that of Thomas Jefferson, and said he believes in limited central government with control at the state and local levels.

A Republican, Stenberg is a native Nebraskan who graduated from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in 1970. He graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1974 and holds a masters degree in business administration from Harvard.

In memory of my beloved husband, Lester Schmutte, who passed away Nov. 11, 1974 Sleep in God's beautiful garden. Away from all sorrows and pain Someday when life's journey is ended we'll be together again. It broke my heart to lose you But you didn't go alone. For part of me went with you, when God called you home.

Bentsen Discounts Primaries

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Unlike some of his Democratic presidential rivals, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas does not believe next year's early primaries will point to the eventual nominee.

Bentsen foresees a much longer sorting out process in which Democrats must eventually turn to a centrist candidate.

"I don't think we'll see someone emerge out of those first few primaries," Bentsen told a Lincoln press conference Monday.

"And I don't think someone is going to win on the first ballot at the convention."

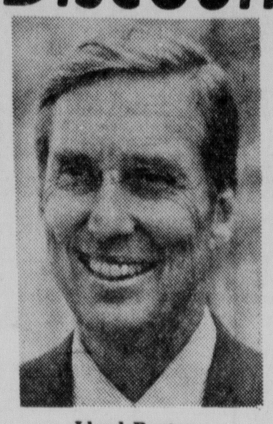

Democrats next year will be "looking for someone they can win with," he said. And that must be a nominee who can "appeal to the broad center" of American politics.

'Looking At Him'

Who? "I think you are looking at him," Bentsen declared.

In his first presidential primary foray into Nebraska, the Texas said he is ready to "start putting together" a statewide campaign organization for what he said will be an active bid for votes and delegates next May.

"I've spent a lot of time here,"

Lloyd Bentsen

he recalled. "I've got a lot of friends."

Bentsen formally headed Lincoln Liberty Life Insurance Co.

The crowded Democratic presidential race is "wide open," he said. "A lot of people are looking for a new face. Hopefully, it will be mine."

Bentsen said only the Democrats can beat themselves in next year's presidential showdown.

Ford 'Hurt Image'

President Ford, he said, "hurt his image as a good guy" with last week's removal of major administration figures.

Ford had enjoyed a reputation for "credibility and openness in communication" when compared to the administration of Richard Nixon, the Texan noted.

Vice President Nelson Rockefeller withdrew from the 1976 presidential ticket because of "pressure (designed) to try to gain support from the more conservative wing of the Republican Party," Bentsen said.

'Policy Differences'

Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger was bounced because of "obvious policy differences" with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, the senator observed.

But, Bentsen said, he believes "a conflict of ideas would be of benefit to his (Ford's) presidency."

In any event, he said, after Kissinger's recent policy victories over both Defense and the Department of Agriculture, the secretary of state will emerge with "his role enlarged."

As for his own policy views, Bentsen proposed moderation of interest rates and an employment tax credit as means of spurring economic recovery for the U.S.

"The Federal Reserve has been much too tight with money," he said.

That makes it difficult for people "to meet their monthly payments on their homes," for business investment and for local government to finance needed projects, he said.

10% Tax Credit

His employment plan would provide a 10% tax credit for the employment of unemployed people up to the first $8,000 in salary over the first year.

That would provide an $800 tax credit per employe, but the money would need to be invested back into job-creating equipment.

Bentsen said the plan could add 600,000 to one million unemployed persons to the work force within a year.

The senator also called for a farm policy which would "moderate the present boom and bust cycles" and an energy program which would develop coal resources while seeking long-term alternative energy sources.

"Sometimes I think we have the attention span of a 5-year-old child in this country," he said. "We've got to work on these problems now."

Inmate Escamilla Asks New Trial In Stabbing

By United Press International

A State Penal Complex inmate, convicted of second-degree murder in the stabbing death of another inmate, Monday asked the Nebraska Supreme Court for a new trial.

Attorneys for Alvaro Escamilla asked for the new trial saying there were problems with a confession he made.

The murder charges stemmed from the stabbing death of Luther W. Wilson on Oct. 13, 1974, in the prison yard. Escamilla was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

The confession, the man's attorneys noted, was ruled illegal by the Lancaster County District Court and was, therefore, not used against him during the trial.

However, the attorneys contended, even though the confession wasn't used, its existence did have an impact on Escamilla. The attorneys said he was afraid that it might be brought up.

"Defendant contends that the fear that his previously obtained illegal confession would be used in an attempt to impeach him so 'chilled' the free exercise of his constitutional privilege to testify in his own behalf that it amounted to a denial of his due process rights," the attorneys said.

Escamilla was serving a 50-year prison term for burglary at the time the stabbing occurred. The district court ordered that the 15-year sentence run consecutively with his current sentence.

His attorneys asked that if the high court wouldn't at least grant a new trial that at least it modify the sentence to run concurrently with the burglary term.

Bell Contracts For Marine Combat Vehicle

Buffalo (AP) — Bell Aerospace said it has received a $278,000 contract to help design and test a new combat vehicle for the U.S. Marine Corps.

Bell, a division of Textron, Inc., said the vehicle will be supported by a cushion of air while traveling over water.

The vehicle will carry 25 Marines at speeds of 35 to 70 miles an hour on water and 40 to 55 on land, Bell said.

The current Marine assault vehicle, Bell said, moves at eight miles an hour over water and 40 over land.

McCollister Formally Enters Race

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Though it has been no secret for some time, Rep. John Yetter McCollister Monday announced his official candidacy for the Republican U.S. Senate nomination in 1976.

The 54-year-old lawmaker made his formal announcements in press conferences scattered across the state — in Omaha, Lincoln, Grand Island, North Platte and Scottsbluff.

He said his "issue-oriented, vigorous campaign" will "focus strictly on the issues" and he pledged to travel to every city and village in the state during the next year.

He declined to comment on "anyone who may or may not run against me . . . This is an issue between Nebraskans and me," he said.

Endorsed By Hruska

The three-term Republican congressman is seeking the seat being vacated by Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb. McCollister received Hruska's blessing as his successor when the veteran lawmaker announced his retirement earlier this year.

So far the Omaha Republican faces token party opposition from former State Sen. Richard Proud of Omaha. Former State Democratic Party Chairman Hess Dyas of Lincoln has said he will seek his party's nomination. And Omaha Mayor Edward Zorinsky, a Republican, has said if he decides to seek the Senate seat, he will switch parties and run as a Democrat.

Asked about a possible Democratic bid by Zorinsky, McCollister said, "I have some things I could say, but right now I have no comment."

'Too Often Personal'

He also declined to respond to personal-political charges by Proud, saying he thinks politics "too often is characterized by personal attacks and too seldom by discussion of issues. I will try to avoid personal attacks," he promised.

McCollister said one of the major themes of his campaign will be the "impact big government makes on our lives." He promised to fight for the rights of small businessmen and farmers, both of which, he said, he identifies closely with.

He said Nebraskans need a "strong and persuasive voice in the U.S. Senate" and "deserve a senator with a proven track record."

Although not everyone will agree with his congressional record, McCollister said, "Every Nebraskan can know where I stand on the issues."

And every Nebraskan can be assured, he said, "that I will continue in the Senate my same philosophy and approach to government which has shaped my record in the House."

More Markets Needed

Commenting on the recent Russian grain deal, he said, "I hope we can sell all the grain we can, anywhere we can sell it. Nebraska depends on healthy grain sales . . . We need to work to develop foreign markets rather than limit them."

He also said he thinks agriculture should be excluded as a "tool in making foreign policy."

McCollister, who headed his own manufacturing firm and who still maintains the family farm near Iowa City, Iowa, is the ranking Republican on the consumer protection and finance subcommittee and the subcommittee on regulatory agencies.

Paul Amen, board chairman of the National Bank of Commerce in Lincoln, is McCollister's statewide campaign chairman. McCollister said he has also recruited 10 regional chairmen, many of whom are new to partisan politics.

John Y. McCollister

Dyas Calls McC 'Part Of Problem'

Democratic senatorial aspirant Hess Dyas of Lincoln Monday said Republican candidate John McCollister has been "part of the problem rather than part of the solution."

McCollister, the Second District congressman, officially announced his Senate candidacy Monday.

Dyas plans to formally enter the race next January.

"Everyone agrees that government out to be fiscally responsible, but since McCollister has been in Congress the national debt has increased faster than anytime in our history," Dyas said.

"Instead of working for tax reform that would close the loopholes that allow oil companies and big corporations to make record profits, John McCollister has co-sponsored a bill that would provide dozens of new loopholes at the expense of the average taxpayer."

Both McCollister and Dyas may "share a recognition that increasingly serious problems exist in this country." the Democrat said.

But "so-called leaders like (retiring) Sen. Roman Hruska and his own self-appointed successor, Rep. McCollister" have been part of the problem, Dyas said.

Cavanaugh Sharply Raps Statement By McCollister

By The Associated Press

Omaha State Sen. John Cavanaugh Monday sharply attacked Rep. John Y. McCollister for saying default by New York City could help Omaha and Nebraska.

"That's the dumbest statement I've ever heard a public official say," Cavanaugh said in an interview.

Cavanaugh is an unannounced candidate for the Democratic nomination for McCollister's congressional seat. McCollister is an announced candidate for the U.S. Senate.

Cavanaugh said default by New York City would increase the interest rates paid by all cities on their bonds. He said property taxpayers would have to pay for the increase.

"I hope that his wife keeps his check book for him," Cavanaugh said.

Both Exon, Warner Pleased By Opinion

Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas Monday performed an act some felt near miraculous: he issued an opinion on the meaning of "express obligations" which pleased both Gov. J. James Exon and Sen. Jerome Warner, two long-time antagonists.

Douglas said in setting the 1976 sales and income tax rates, the State Board of Equalization and Assessment should consider only the "express obligations" spelled out in law.

Any deliberation going beyond those specifics might infringe on legislative duties, Douglas said, because the law is "vague" as to what other express obligations are.

As a result, the five Board of Equalization members Monday decided not to put into rule and regulation form what it considers all express obligations to be.

When the board meets Saturday to set the 1976 tax rates, it will essentially compute the rates using the future obligations stated in law.

Gov. J. James Exon, the board's chairman, who has been criticized for not defining all anticipated but unappropriated obligations for tax-setting purposes, said Douglas's opinion supports his past position.

Basically, the express obligations spelled out in law include the personal property tax exemptions, homestead exemptions, resource development fund and capital construction.

"This is exactly what we considered in the past," Exon said.

Warner said he is "delighted" with Douglas's ruling. "It's a positive ruling and is consistent with what I wrote (in a letter to the Board of Equalization)."

Warner disputed Exon's contention that the ruling legitimatized the board's past actions. "They haven't considered (express obligations mentioned in law) once. The Department of Administrative Services didn't certify to the board these obligations.

"They can't duck it anymore," Warner concluded.

Exon's critics have contended had the board considered these obligations in setting past tax rates, the state might not now be facing its cash flow problems.

Exon has responded to these critics, asking them if they considered express obligations when the Legislature limited the 1975 income tax to 12%.

Burglars Take Guns, Ammo; Owner Hunting

Belongings valued at more than $5,000 were taken in a burglary at the Jack T. Kneifl home at 2607 Picadilly Ct., according to police reports Monday.

Six handguns, two shotguns, four rifles, 4,000 to 7,000 rounds of ammunition, an electric typewriter, a movie camera and an electric adding machine were taken.

Police said the burglar or burglars broke into the home while Kneifel was away on a hunting trip.

The burglar or burglars apparently used a credit card, slipping it between the door jamb and door, to push the door's bolt back, police said.

In another burglary reported over the weekend, about $3,400 worth of checks were stolen from Eno Meat at 1911 R. Police said entrance to the business was made by breaking a window.

Coal Slurry Pipeline Bill Hearings Set

State Sen. Maurice Kremer of Aurora announced Monday the Public Works Committee will hold hearings in Ogallala and Bridgeport on the proposed coal slurry pipeline.

Kremer said the committee will open the Ogallala hearing at 10:30 a.m. next Monday and will open the Bridgeport hearing at 7:30 a.m. on the same date.

Before the Legislature is a bill which would give coal slurry pipelines the power of eminent domain.

The bill was prompted by a plan to build a pipeline from the Wyoming coal fields to Arkansas, which would stretch across northern Nebraska. The pipeline is being proposed by Energy Transport Systems Inc.

The bill on eminent domain powers was introduced during this year's session. But the lawmakers decided to hold action on it until the 1976 session pending results of an interim study.

Unicam Okays Appointments Made By Exon

The Legislature Monday voted to confirm Gov. J. James Exon's appointments made since the last session adjourned, including three department heads.

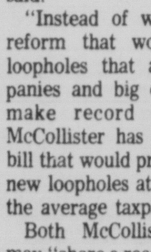

The Unicameral voted to confirm E. Benjamin Nelson, director of the Department of Insurance; Jack Cleavenger, director of the Department of Public Institutions, and R. James Pearson, director of the Department of Motor Vehicles.

The Legislature also voted to approve the appointment of Phil Weaver to the Liquor Control Commission, Karl E. Dickinson to the State Highway Commission and George Rebensdorf to the State College Board of Trustees.

Stenberg Seeks Legislative Seat Held By Fowler

Don Stenberg, a Lincoln attorney, has announced his candidacy for the 27th District legislative seat, a post held by Sen. Steve Fowler.

In announcing his candidacy, Stenberg said Nebraska needs to make greater efforts in the fields of energy conservation and research.

Don Stenberg

Stenberg, 27, compared his political philosophy to that of Thomas Jefferson, and said he believes in limited central government with control at the state and local levels.

A Republican, Stenberg is a native Nebraskan who graduated from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in 1970. He graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1974 and holds a masters degree in business administration from Harvard.

In memory of my beloved husband, Lester Schmutte, who passed away Nov. 11, 1974. Sleep in God's beautiful garden. Away from all sorrows and pain. Someday when life's journey is ended we'll be together again. It broke my heart to lose you. But you didn't go alone. For part of me went with you, when God called you home.
